Compiled by 1954 Humanoid Reports. Focus on France. The unprecedented and until possibly 1973 unduplicated wave of humanoid reports took place throughout France and some parts of Italy. Other reports came in from England, US, Germany, Canada & other European countries but at a much lesser extent. Towards the end of the year the focus seemed to shift to Venezuela & Brazil. Whatever the case it was indeed a memorable year. Following is a list of known Humanoid reports for the year 1954.

The famous Lotti Danielli aliens.

A reported landing of a silvery disc from which a tall human like occupant resembling the "Adamski" type beings, with long blond hair and wearing a sky blue coverall emerged, he reportedly walked to a nearby stream and obtained some water; he then went back into the object and took off. No other information.

Time: morning

The witness, Mrs. Maureen Gardner, a housewife living with her husband who was serving in the RAF in this little village had just come out of the lounge and was walking towards the kitchen when she found her way blocked by a man standing on the landing in front of her, preventing her from walking any further. She wasn't at all frightened, or amazed even, to see him. He was surprised to see her, but she wasn't nervous. What surprised her most of all was the height---she is nearly six feet tall and she had to tilt her head back quite a bit to look up at him. He was over seven feet tall and was wearing a one-piece 'siren suit' which was metallic blue in color, although it didn't seem to be made of metal---more of a soft, nylon sort of material. It glimmered, but not like Lurex material does these days---it just glimmered with a soft, metallic light. She didn't look at his feet---she didn't have the time. What she looked at nearly all the time were his eyes, his face, and his features---and features is the operative word in this experience---not because he was a man, but because he was a strange looking man. He had a very high, broad forehead---she doesn't remember noticing his nose. He had a slit for a mouth, she 'slit' because the lips weren't protruding like ours do---they might have turned inwards---she doesn't know. He had high cheek bones but they weren't protruding, the bones were 'heavy' underneath the skin. His eyes were very large.

His jaw was a different shape---there was no jaw bone to see at all but the shape of his face underneath the eyes was pointed. There was a chin, yes, but below his eyes and down to his chin the skin was absolutely immobile, as if he hadn't opened his mouth for ages. The dominant shape of his face was a blunt-ended triangle with his chin the blunt end. His eyes were deep blue. He had pupils and the expression in his eyes was something that she shall never forget. She can remember the man now as distinctly as she saw him then. His ears weren't visible, nor any hair, because covering his cranium and his head and ears was a very tight-fitting helmet, and his helmet was made of what seemed like Perspex. It was a translucent material you could not see through, not an astronaut's helmet, though. The suit fitted his neck, fitted the waist---there was no belt around the middle; he was definitely a man. There weren't any seams, fastenings or buttons, or anything else like that in his clothing. His skin was pink. He was a white man.

He didn't say anything---he just stood and looked at her and she looked at him. If he was trying to give her a message, she doesn't know what it was. She didn't have the impression of receiving anything from him. She felt compelled to look in his eyes, though there was no specific expression in them. He had no eyebrows, or wrinkles in his skin, and one got the impression of great intelligence---wisdom even. She had no idea how old he was but she had the impression he knew everything about her there was to know. She didn't hear or see him come into the house, and when he left he just left. One second she saw him, the next she didn't see him. He didn't disappear in a cloud of vapor, or anything like that--just wasn't there anymore. He appeared to have been flesh and blood, she certainly couldn't see through him. He wasn't a 'projection' and was solid.

An anonymous witness reported seeing a disc-shaped object land and a small man come out of it. He was entirely covered in a dark tight-fitting diving suit, which did not allow distinguishing none of his features. The little man then communicated in French with the witness saying the following absurd sentences:

“Intelligence is prohibited to the constipated and cancer comes from a tooth ache” The little man then walked back into the disc, which then took off and disappeared.

Date: 1954

Time: unknown

A local resident reported seeing a flying object shaped like a “box or basket” flying towards the village of Staroye Merzleyevo. The object flew at a low altitude and emitted a muffled humming sound. The object then touched and tree and landed and two strange “men” of unusual appearance then exited the object. Both men seemed occupied in performing several tasks around the environs. After a few moments the two strangers returned to the object which then lifted up again and flew away. Local villagers, though simple people, noticed that the strange device was neither an airplane or a helicopter or an air balloon with basket, it was something they had heard or seen before.

Time: morning

Air Marshal Sir Peter Horsley was phoned by a certain General Martin inviting him to meet a Mrs. Markham that night at her London flat in Smith Street, Chelsea. Morning there, in a dimly lit room, he was introduced to a 'Mr. Janus.' Without any preliminaries, writes Sir Peter, 'Mr. Janus dived straight into the deep end by asking me to tell him all I knew about UFOs. He listened patiently...At the end I thought I might be equally as direct and asked Janus what his interest was? He answered me a quite simply, "I would like to meet the Duke of Edinburgh." Somewhat taken aback, Sir Peter replied that this would not be easy. But it was here the strangeness of it all started---the man's extraordinary ability to read my thoughts.' Asked why he wanted to meet Prince Phillip, Janus replied, "He is a man of great vision...who believes strongly in the proper relationship between man and nature which will prove of great importance in future galactic harmony...perhaps you and I can discuss the subject first and you will be able to judge whether I'm dangerous or not. Sir Peter devotes 14 pages to the ensuing two hour discourse, of which selected excerpts follow.

First of all Janus claimed he was indeed an extraterrestrial and then began by pointing out that man was 'now striving to break his earthly bonds and travel to the Moon and the planets beyond'. He continued: But flight to the stars is Man's ultimate dream, although knowledge of the vast distances involved in interstellar flight makes it appear only a dream. Yet perhaps after a hundred years or so...exploration of his own solar system may be complete and it is just not in Man's nature to stop there...Just as tribes found other tribes and Christopher Columbus discovered on his travels unknown centers of ancient civilizations so man in his journeys through the universe may find innumerable centers of culture far more ancient than his own...He will discover a wealth of experiences infinitely more startling and beautiful than can be imagined: and infinite variety of agencies and forces as yet unknown: great fields of gravity and anti-gravity where objects are accelerated across space like giant sling shots, even other universes with different space and time formula.

It was just high enough that the driver could not see it. The witness could see human-like persons walking around inside the object which was lit up. They wore some type of uniform like clothing. There was no sound or exterior lights and the object was going roughly the same speed of that of the car. The car drove for about a mile or two and then turned left into an area that had a lot of trees and lost sight of the object.

Amado Alonso was fishing for shrimp on the Manacas River, he carried a handheld light. After a while he felt as if someone was behind him and he shone the light in that direction but did not see anybody, he heard footsteps but did not see anything. This occurred on several occasions. The area around him was very dark and wooded. Moments later he noticed two very tall figures coming in his direction. They seemed to walk like normal humans but were wearing some kind of tight-fitting dark coveralls that covered them completely. Afraid he threw the handheld light at them. This apparently distracted them and Amado immediately fled the area. At about 200 or 300 meters away he noticed some lights over the area and when he looked he noticed that these were on a large saucer shaped object, which hovered a few seconds, then turned off the lights and shot away at incredible speed without making any noise.

Several (at least 2) UFOs were detected visually and on radars by the Soviet military. Objects flew over the secret missile and radar sites located in Saratov and Volgograd regions near the river Volga and towards the launch missile positions of "Kapustin Yar" state central test range # 4, one of the first Soviet missile test ranges. According to military opinion "the flight appeared to be for reconnaissance purposes". Three or four Mig-15 aircraft were immediately scrambled from Volsk airbase NE of Saratov with orders to force the UFOs to land. After several aggressive attempts to compel the UFOs to land, the Migs opened fire. Immediately after that the radio communication with the all the Migs was interrupted and the Migs did not return to their base. A search and rescue operation brought no results---no wreckage was found. The pilots were reported missing. Apparently the Migs were either totally destroyed or abducted by the UFOs. A state commission was created to investigate the case. A member of the commission, a Mr. Popov emphasized the similarity between the incident near Moscow in 1938 and this new case. A classified report was submitted to the special military Soviet archive on UFOs which was created in 1955 almost a year after the incident. The Soviet Ministry of Defense kept a special archive on UFOs inside an underground bunker in a military garrison named Beryezovka-2 on Krasnyi Kut range in the Saratov region. The archive existed from 1955 to 1991. The archive was reportedly destroyed by orders from Moscow in 1991.

Michael Kelly, a young pre-school child at the time remembered finding himself one late evening surrounded by "boy-scouts" escorting him to a field near his home. They were about his size in height and were wearing some kind of uniform. The witness still thinking they were "scouts" asked the little men why were they not wearing hats or caps and one of them responded that they didn't wear hats. Once in the field he found himself in a circle of beaming lights that appeared solid in nature. He looked directly above him and saw a large disc-shaped object hovering silently overhead. The object had colorful lights on its outer rim. He asked the "scouts" what the object was and they told him it was a "helicopter". Location. Near Acapulco Mexico

Date: January 1954

Time: 02:00 a.m.

While driving the winding roads that separate Mexico City from Acapulco, Armando Zurbaran's only concern was arriving at the Pacific port city before sunrise, in order to meet a business partner. At some point during the drive, he was overcome by an almost hypnotic state of lethargy, which caused him to pull over. Not far ahead on the road, he was able to see a number of men clad in overalls with wide belts gathered around a strange, brilliantly lit object. Before he realized, and having no idea how it happened, he was walking toward the object, escorted by the longhaired men. A slight buzzing sound filled his ears as he entered the saucer. Zurbaran was going down in history as his country's first Contactee (how about Salvador Villanueva in 1953?) and this was his first question to the ship's captain, "Why had he been chosen for this honor?" "You are neither the first nor last earthman to be chosen for testing," his host replied. "Our task, slow though it may seem, is designed to persuade. We choose the likeliest, most malleable persons for contact, so that they might better transmit our messages." Zurbaran was then treated to a review of the smallest details of his life on a screen within the vehicle's wall and a tour of the ship's interior, guided by one of the fair, longhaired crewmen (reminiscent of Adamski's visitors) who answered each of the puzzled human's questions in detail. The space travelers, he learned, employed a gravity repulsion system to cover the distance between their home world and Earth, scanning the space ahead of them with a radar-like device to dispel any objects that may lie in their path. Unlike other contactee stories of the time, Zurbaran's visitors did not claim to originate from any planet in the Solar System, nor did they mention their planet of origin by name. The craft, he learned, had taken off while he was unaware and was now in space. Zurbaran peeked out a porthole, hoping for a glimpse of the world seen from above, but could only see a grayish mist until at a distance of 40,000 km, the ship's captain pointed out the planet to him through another porthole. Excited by the vista, the human asked the captain if he could perhaps be taken to visit their world, but his request was turned down. He was told that perhaps someday such an invitation would be tendered, at the right moment. Zurbaran was able to sleep a normal sleep and eat with the UFO's crew. His description of taking a shower in space is particularly memorable, "I shall never be able to forget it. That bathroom was a new and unimaginable experience for me. Standing upright, facing an angle of the wall filled with tiny holes, I was covered in warm air, and as it grew stronger, it became transformed into damp air, impregnating my skin like a warm, wet breeze. When I was completely drenched, I was offered a sort of liquid soap, which I rubbed all over myself, from head to toe. Standing once more before the warm air sprinklers, I felt the soap begin to evaporate and my skin become completely clean. The air then ceased to be damp, turning dry and warm instead...becoming colder until agreeably cool." Breakfast in orbit around the planet consisted of fruit juices tasting imperceptibly of mangoes or other tropical fruits. The ship's captain advised him that to his people, milk was a principal source of nourishment, but that they did not get it from cows but from a mixture of terrestrial and marine plant life. Zurbaran ate grilled meat, butter and cheese in the vehicle's mess-room. He was told that the provisions were transported aboard the craft via telepathy (?). Unknown to Zurbaran, thousands of miles away, in the Pyrenees between Spain and France, Jaime Bordas a resident of the village of Castell, was engaged in a strange experience with a six-foot tall, overall wearing humanoid with long blond hair. The otherworldly being would only drink milk as its sole nourishment. (1951). After the meal, the captain proceeded to regale Zurbaran with his world's philosophy, religion and history, children and the elderly received special consideration, and there was equality between the occupations. The average life span was 250 years, and collaboration had replaced competition in the area of commerce...a utopia made possible by a being they termed, "The Master" or "Beloved Number Nine" who was at the heart of their religion, and who had ruled them for a span of three thousand earth years. The spaceship returned Zurbaran to his car by the roadside. Confused but excited by his experience, he continued the balance of his drive to Acapulco, learning upon his arrival that it had only taken him an hour and a half to complete a six-hour journey. He did not see the space-people who had befriended him and offered him hospitality again for 15 years, until one night in January 1969 near the outskirts of Mexico City; he gave a ride to a young hitchhiker who turned out to be one the crewmen aboard the UFO that night 15 years in the past.

25-year old Martin Antiman (now a local Indian "Cacique" 'chieftain') was in his room alone when he suddenly heard a very high pitched sound. At the same time a type of "magnetic" force somehow introduced him into a type cabin or "elevator" which had appeared in the room. Immediately after the cabin or elevator departed at fantastic speed and everything became very silent around him. The door suddenly opened and he stepped out finding himself in a sort of mountainous valley very desolate in appearance. He walked about 100 meters and saw several men carrying large bags on their shoulders. He yelled and whistled at the men in order to communicate with them, but these seemed to ignore him. He then heard a voice in his mind that told him that the men did not answer him because "they had no brains" and could not hear the voice of the "creator". The voice then told him that he must tell all he could about this "vision". Soon he was introduced inside the cabin or elevator like object. Moments later the door opened and he found himself back in his room. He never spoke to anyone about this incident for at least 20 years.

A young student, Miss E. D. Bonacini, was returning home with her boyfriend when both of them observed a rectangular red light in the sky. Looking at it again quickly, they saw that the light had changed its shape, becoming a kind of "upside down parachute" that was moving toward them. After 90 seconds, it was very close, nearly overhead, hovering at a height comparable with that of a three--or four story building. The object resembled a half sphere with a small protuberance in its lower section and a very bright area midsection, fading away toward its outer perimeter. The object was "as wide as the road," i.e. approximately 18 meters in width. The two witnesses watched from a hidden position for about nine minutes. They had the feeling that "somebody" was observing them from inside of the object. Then, they decided to run away. As they an, they object tilted 45 degrees, attaining a vertical orientation and departing quickly in the direction of Fiumicino. The craft slowed down after some kilometers and became lost from view following another 90 seconds or so. As it departed, the object displayed all the colors of the rainbow.

While pushing her son in a baby carriage across the bridge over the River Save, Mrs Jandot observed a motorcyclist staring into the sky. Going a few feet further, and seeing no change in his concentration at something above, she too looked upwards and, a short way off over a grove of poplars, just above the river; she saw a motionless, silent object of oval form and metallic appearance. A little cone at the rear ejected a white smoke; inside the object she was able to see two human heads, "heads like you and me." She thought it was perhaps 4 meters across. The heads were seen presumably through transparent ports or windows, although this is not stated. After a short period of time, the object departed at a vertiginous speed in the direction of Toulouse. There were two other persons on or near the bridge that had also stopped to watch, and whom Mrs Jandot knew. Curiously, not one of the four witnesses acknowledged to any other having sighted such a strange spectacle; rather they all continued on their way as if nothing unusual had just occurred.

An anonymous working man returning home on his scooter was attracted by a large white light, about 30 meters in width and about 200 meters away from the witness. He stopped the scooter and propped it up against a tree and decided to investigate what the light was. As he approached the light he noticed that it was a disc shaped craft with a large dome on the top. Suddenly an opening on the center part of the dome and a ladder was lowered to the ground. Two figures then descended to the ground. These were kind of hard to distinguish since the light from the object was still very bright. They seemed to be wearing tight fitting diver suits that covered their bodies except for the head. They stood around and appeared to converse amongst each other; soon they noticed the stunned witness and walked towards him. Paralyzed with fear the witness could not move and could only stare at the beings. He described them as about 1.40 meters in height, with large pear shaped heads, with large slanted eyes and pointed chins. Their outfits were luminous and very tight fitting, revealing parts of their anatomy, which was human-like. One of the beings then spoke in perfect Italian, telling the witness not to be afraid that they were friendly in nature and would not do him any harm. He then imparted an anti nuclear war message and one of peace. Moments later both figures climbed back inside the object. The witness then heard a loud whistling sound and the craft became white-blue and then bright red in color. It rose up vertically and disappeared at great speed into the sky. According to the witness at the site where the object had landed he found a scorched area of about 30 meters in circumference.

Walking along the coast near Lossiemouth, Cedric Allingham heard a swishing sound, and looking up, saw through binoculars a flying saucer only slightly different from Adamski's. 3 hours later he heard and saw it again, coming in for a landing 50 yards away. "The whole metallic body, seemed to glow faintly," but was not translucent; it was 50 ft wide and 20 ft high, resembling polished aluminum. A 6 ft man with a deep tan skin and a high forehead got out. His garment covered him from neck to toes---he wore no shoes. In each nostril was a tiny tube. When Allingham drew planetary orbits, he nodded when Mars was pointed out, and repeated "Mars." In further exchanges he verified Allingham's suggestions that the Martian canals consist of a central string of water surrounded by vegetation. Allingham touched and photographed the saucer and also photographed the pilot, from a side rear angle; these photos are reproduced in his book. A slight humming marked the take off of the saucer. The interview had lasted ½ hour.

The 34th US president, Mr. Dwight David Eisenhower was flown to Palm Springs where he dropped his wife off. His press secretary told the world that he was on a golf vacation. The president had a press conference scheduled for that day but never showed up for it. There were rumors that he was ill. The official explanation was that he had a toothache and needed to see a dentist. Newsmen, however, were never able to learn which dentist treated him. Instead he was flown by helicopter to Edwards AFB. There, the preliminary arranged meeting with representatives of an alien civilization was organized. The president was brought in, along with several members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, MAJESTIC-12, several members of the National Security Council and a representative from Rockefeller's office, plus a representative from the Rothschild's and some scientists. Five alien spacecrafts had landed. 3 saucer-shaped and 2 were cigar shaped. Three UFOs landed on the runway close to the hangars. Aliens went out of the crafts, and negotiations were being conducted. The aliens were of the typical Nordic type, with flaxen long golden hair and pale blue eyes. Negotiations were inside isolated and very guarded hangars of the base. One of the witnesses an anonymous U S test pilot who told British Lord Clancarty about the case, informed that the aliens spoke English and wanted Eisenhower to start an education program for the people of the United States, and eventually the Earth. Eisenhower replied that he didn't think the world was ready for that. The president said that his concern was that a worldwide announcement that aliens had landed would likely cause panic and collapse of all political, economic and religious institutions. The aliens agreed with that opinion, saying that they would continue to contact isolated individuals until the people of earth got used to the idea of their presence. The aliens also demanded from the US Government to get rid of nuclear weapons and were proposing other advance technology in exchange for that, but this alien proposition was taken with high suspicion and was rejected. While Eisenhower viewed the UFO 2 individuals were able to tip it upside down. The UFO was a smooth disk about 30 ft in diameter. Everyone stood back and the strangest phenomenon on record of the base occurred. The UFO dematerialized (or became invisible) right in front of their eyes. Everything was filmed. Then it materialized again. This possibly was the direct cause of Mr. Eisenhower's first heart attack. There is apparently independent confirmation of this supposed meeting.

Mrs. J. her husband and her five-year old daughter had just sat down for their mid-day meal in their home a one story cottage on the outskirts of Norco, when they gradually became aware of a very odd sounding metallic drone which increased in volume as they listened. As the noise grew louder, the witness's husband suggested that she go outside and investigate as whatever was causing it seemed to be approaching the house. The husband was suffering from an arthritic ailment which had left his neck and spine immobile, and his disability would have made it most difficult for him to investigate. Mrs. J was joined by her daughter at the back door of their cottage. The visibility was rather poor, due to the haze left by an early morning fog. Almost immediately their attention was drawn to an object which was then just passing over their heads. The object was moving slowly (Mrs. J. estimates not more than 5 m.p.h.) and was apparently quite low, as its edges were clearly defined despite the haze. The object itself appeared to be quite solid.

The object moved to a position above a tree in the backyard. The tree stands about 15ft from the cottage. The object was aluminum colored and appeared to be about 20 ft in length and 10ft across at its widest part, its shape, so it seemed to Mrs. J., resembled that of a rowing boat. The object came to a complete stop just above the tree, and the metallic droning sound subsided to an almost inaudible hum. Although the object had absolutely no protrusions such as wings or propellers, it did have a transparent domed-shaped affair on top. Inside this dome the witnesses could see five "men" sitting in a semi-circular position facing them. Mrs J. describes these "men" as wearing neutral-colored uniforms, having dark eyes and hair, rather long faces and dull olive-colored skins. She also states that their features may have been distorted since she was viewing them through the dome of the object. All of them wore helmets. At this point the 'men' appeared to lean forward and stare most intently at the witnesses. One of the 'men' in particular seemed to "gaze right through" them and gave Mrs. J. the distinct impression of a "cold scientific mind, dissecting me bit by bit".

"They definitely stared," says Mrs. J. "One in particular looked right into my eyes." She is also at a loss to explain the apparent interest in herself and her little daughter. "I wish I had had the presence of mind to have talked to them, but I stood there gaping, completely flabbergasted." Mrs. J. estimates that the "men" must have stared at them for a full minute before leaning back in their seats. The droning noise then grew louder and the object began to move off towards the northeast, disappearing into the haze at an estimated 35 mile per hour. In a very excited state, Mrs. J. and her daughter ran into the cottage to tell Mr. J. what they had seen. Mr. J. estimated that they had watched the object in their backyard for almost four minutes. Neither of the witnesses seems to feel that the object they saw was of extraterrestrial origin. "There was something quite earthly about it", Mrs. J. states. She also feels that the object itself had the appearance of something "old", although she concedes that she may have been mistaken in this impression.

Monsieur B was walking home when he came upon a brightly luminous object standing on or hovering over the ground, only 10 meters away; a discoidal craft 5 meters in diameter, the upper part more curved, and with a small dome. Beside it stood a slender man 5'2" tall, wearing a luminous tight fitting one piece suit including the head. When he turned toward Mr. B he was seen to have a veil in front of his face. He spoke some words to a second being, shorter 4'9" and with a larger head, who wore a similar garb. On his abdomen this 2nd entity wore a sort of flashlight, from which a beam of white light was turned on B, paralyzing him. Then this 2nd entity raised his veil, revealing a grin on his face that exposed all his teeth. His forehead was high, the chin & nose pronounced, the lips very thin, and the complexion dark. The eyes were white, showing no iris or pupil, and exuded a large brown tear. The being made beckoning gestures; then both walked to the craft, got onto it, and vanished into it. B heard a metallic noise, and then lost consciousness. When he came to himself, the machine was 10 meters above the ground, 50-70 meters away, and was spinning, making a faint noise. Its shape now differed, showing 2 illuminated portholes on a bulge. There was an "indefinable" smell. After a bright flash of light, the object became gold-colored; it rose in a spiral, then moved off leaving a trail of sparks. The next day B found flattened greenery at the site.

In this suburb of Syracuse on a Sunday, an information specialist and his wife saw a 20-foot wide disc-shaped object being examined on the ground by several men who were taking pictures. The craft had flashing and rotating multi-colored lights on top. The next day an officer told them the event was a military secret. Later police denied the whole incident ever took place. The disk had been loaded into a flatbed trailer, covered by tarpaulin and moved exclusively at night by a military team to nearby Griffis AFB in Rome NY, where it was hidden in a surface hangar. Another source confirmed that he accidentally saw and filmed this object inside the hangar at Griffis. Around 1956 the disk was taken to Nellis testing site in Nevada, or the Papoose range. On its way there the disk was studied at Wright Patterson. Because of its small size and weight it was transported cross country on a flatbed truck. Nothing is known of its alien occupants. The aliens possibly abandoned the disk after it soft landed (crashed) on the outskirts of Syracuse. Apparently the alien crew left the damaged or deactivated disk and it was probably found by the military with its entry hatch opened. There is also the possibility that the disk was a non-piloted alien reconnaissance probe that lost control and plummeted to earth. In the early 1990's it was removed from the S4 site either to White Sands or to the Fort Huachuca underground facility.

10-year old "Michel G" was playing with other children in an attic above his residence, under very beautiful weather. A little before mid-day the children heard the sound of two jet aircraft flying very low above the rooftops. Michel rushed into the courtyard with four of his friends to see the jets but the sight was blocked by a nearby agricultural building. At this point they noticed to their right a sort of aerial machine in the shape of a giant 'dragonfly' with wings, which descended and landed in the center of the court. The strange craft was bright pink in color and apparently transparent in nature, the interior clearly visible.

There was a sort of cockpit on the front with two beings sitting on armchairs at the front of the control panel. The beings seemed to be looking at their surroundings outside of their craft. At the rear of the structure the boys noticed several dark pink tube-like structures. The craft remained 30 seconds to one minute and then set out again moving up slowly and silently. There were also adults present at the event including Michel G's parents. A sketch shows a craft resembling a dragonfly in profile albeit 'naively' drawn, the 'head' like a transparent helicopter cockpit. The beings are represented without much detail except that they had a pair of antennas on their heads similar to snails.

Ten year old Helen was dawdling a bit to enjoy the sunshine and fresh air. School was out and she was on her way home from Father Brown's Parochial School near Pittsburgh. Her school uniform felt warm and itchy that sunny afternoon and Helen couldn't wait to be free of it for the summer. Helen took a short cut through a thicket of trees as she headed home. It was a familiar path and she moved along comfortably. The trail twisted around and Helen froze as she rounded the turn.

Before her was a small, saucer-shaped craft. It sat squat on the ground as she observed it. The craft was smooth and showed no openings, seams or marks. The craft was small enough that it couldn't have held more than one or two beings. After a time, Helen's eyes shifted to a being about six feet from the craft. The figure was humanoid but she felt that it was not human. The proportions were wrong for a person. The being was extremely thin and held itself oddly. Helen studied the figure for about fifteen seconds but it never moved. Helen stood frozen too. She had no idea what to do and was afraid that any movement would draw the being's attention. Without warning, the figure and craft just faded away. It happened quickly and Helen found herself looking around to see if they had moved elsewhere, but there was no sign of either the craft or the being. They had simply disappeared into thin air.

Several days after Osmo Liene and his brother Esko had seen a large disc shaped object that flew over a road over them knocking them down and covering them with a white sandy quartz like substance, Osmo suddenly woke up after hearing steps and voices talking in an unknown language approaching the front porch of his house. Osmo ran to the front door in order to confront the intruders when the door was suddenly yanked open. Three men then entered the house. All were described as somewhat shorter than humans and having oriental eyes. The leader seemed to be a young man of about 19 years of age, who asked Osmo if he was the "young boy who built radios." Osmo said yes and then the stranger marched into his room and explored Osmo's radios. During the whole episode Osmo's family remained sleeping. The younger of the men approached Osmo's father and looked down on him with a benevolent expression. The second intruder looked to be about 35 years old and was carrying a bag. This man sat on the table in the living room and told Osmo to sit on the end of the table. A small TV-set like device was then produced; it had a monitor and a peg on top. The man lifted the device to the table in front of him. The third man appeared to be the eldest, seemed to be about 45-50 years old stood next to the window looking out, apparently standing guard. Suddenly big drops of sweat began rolling down his face as if he was feeling ill. Osmo suggested some water, but was told, "It was the air they were breathing, that it will soon pass." Osmo tried to turn the lights on but was forbidden by the strangers. Osmo was told to sit on the table and an "interview" ensued. The 35-year-old man after each questing would crank the peg on the TV-like device and an image would appear on it apparently showing Osmo in apparently future scenes and situations. He was shown images of his future life all the way up "to the end." At one point Osmo attempting to touch the peg himself but was angrily reprimanded. Osmo noticed that he was able to understand what the men spoke if he looked directly at them, but if he turned his head he could only hear a murmur like sound. The men then conducted an "experiment" on Osmo, which felt like some type of electric shock and he soon fell into a state of ecstasy. He was then apparently interviewed in length. The men eventually left out the front door.

The elder man apparently began asking the same questions as before. During the interview the other men began performing other chores around the house. One carried a bottle-sized cylinder, apparently a medical device. The elder man apparently instructed the others in how to use this device. The men apparently lifted Osmo's still sleeping father up and a strange headphone device placed on his head next was Osmo's brother and then his mother. Rubem Hellwig a rice planter was driving towards the plantation when he saw a strange object, standing at a distance of about 50 meters from the right hand side of the road. His first inclination was to ignore it and drive on, but suddenly a strange feeling of curiosity came over him, and he drew up, in order to observe the object which was a small craft about the size of a Volkswagen car and shaped like a melon, or a rugby football. There were two men of slim build, one of them seated in the small cabin of the craft, and the other outside, picking quantities of a certain type of grass (capim) and handling them to the other. The height of the two men was about 1 meter 60cms and their faces were uncovered and their complexions brownish. Seeing him watching them, the two men exchanged a few words and then the one who was outside came over to him carrying in his hand a liter sized bottle full of reddish liquid. He greeted Rubem Hellwig courteously, and although Hellwig did not understand the strange language in which the man spoke, he nevertheless knew exactly what the man was saying to him, namely that he needed a small quantity of ammonia for his machine.

To this Hellwig, replied that the only place where he would be able to get ammonia was at the chemist's shop in Sao Pedro do Sul, a small town not far distant. The man thanked him and returned to the machine and got in. At once there appeared around the craft a circle of bluish yellow luminosity, which made the craft appear round, whereas it had been long and semi-oval. From each side of the cabin there emerged four tubes some two or three inches long, and when the motor of the craft was started up a sort of yellowish flame shot out through these tubes. At the same moment a clear blue flame combined to give the craft the appearance of being round as just said. Without the slightest sound, the craft vanished instantaneously from sight.

Hellwig spent the night at a place farther along the road, and next day was up early, continuing his journey. He had driven only about four kilometers when he suddenly encountered what appeared to be the same machine. It was on the highway itself, on the left hand, but this time the occupants were a tall fair-complexioned man and two women. The women had light brown complexions, large dark slanted eyes and long silky black hair. All three individuals were dressed alike, in one-piece brown garments, resembling velvety leather, with a zip-type closure running from top to bottom. They called Hellwig, and he calmly walked over to them. They treated him with great kindness and cordiality and, so far as he could grasp, seemed to be intensely surprised because he was not afraid of them but, on the contrary, was observing everything and quietly taking it all in. They asked, "Wasn't he afraid of them?"

To which he replied that he could not fear people who were so correct in their behavior and, as it seemed, so friendly and so intelligent. They then explained to him that they were scientists who desired to learn about the conditions upon this planet which, as they had now learnt from him, was called "Earth". They were astonished at the name "Brazil", and said it was the richest country that they had yet visited on this planet, and said the Brazilians seemed very peace loving people, though they could not understand why the Brazilians should always flee at the sight of them, who were interested only in peacefulness and work.

To this he pointed out that the Brazilians had reason to be suspicious, for the visitors might be from other countries on this Earth, who were examining the terrain for future warlike incursions. They smiled at this, and said that they themselves possessed weapons of such destructive capacity that they always fled so as not to have to use them. They showed him one such weapon, a small thing about twenty centimeters in length, which struck him as comical. The visitors then exchanged glances, and the man invited Hellwig to view the craft and Hellwig did so, the man explaining how it worked. The total length of the machine was less than three meters. The oval front end was just like that of an aeroplane except that it had no propeller. The cabin was about 90cms wide and not much more than 1 meter high. The material of this front part was transparent, of a metal resembling Pyrex glass and of about the same thickness and affording perfect visibility. The entrance to the rear part of the craft was from the back, where there were seats for two crew members, the pilot sitting alone in front.

The outer covering of the craft consisted of two layers of a metal having the special quality that, the greater the heat encountered, the greater its resistance to it. The space between these two layers, some eight centimeters thick, contained refrigeration equipment for controlling the temperature in the craft. The two oval ends of the machine not quite as pointed as the thin end of an egg but more like the wider end were identical in all respects except for certain grid-like openings, somewhat like the grids on cars. These grids had holes in them, some 3 to 4 cms wide, air being taken through those at the front and the combustion exhaust going out through those at the rear. Along the whole length of the base of the cabin ran a compartment divided down the center into two sections. In each of these sections there was a sort of stony material resembling carbide, and a mixture similar to red ferruginous soil. In the first section the reaction was brought about by means of a liquid of a deep yellow color and in the other it was by means of another liquid of deep blue color.

This is the fuel used, the combustion of which may perhaps be thermonuclear, but it is completely cold, for no heat at all is involved in this combustion. As in the phenomenon of tide rips the shock occurs when via the four tubes already described, the vapor or liquid from this disintegration comes in contact with the air. The greater the quantity of liquid converted to gas on contact with the air, the greater the velocity. The combination of the colors from the combustion coming out through the tail is what gives the craft a rounded appearance. When the craft is traveling at high speed, a sort of long tail is formed. They explained to Hellwig that their clothing served the dual purpose of protection against radiation and regulation of the body temperature, without both of which space travel is impossible. They said furthermore that they live far beyond the farthest star known to our world, and it seemed to him that they called their world "Arion" or something similar, but he could not be too sure of this, for some time after the meeting with them, he began to experience mental phenomena which, so far, medicine has been unable to either to explain or to cure. These people said, Hellwig, can live perfectly easily among us without anybody realizing who and what they are. They said they were scientists studying the Universe, promised to return to see him, and indeed told him to get ready to make a trip with them.

Undocumented report about a possible UFO crash, according to the source new evidence reveals that the US navy in the Irish Sea whilst participating in Operation Mariner monitored UFO activity on 3-4-1957 and further witness testimony was credible from a report by a Tiger Moth airman in the Magna Flux exercise. Ufologist Sharon Larkin claims to be in contact with a witness who was detained by the military for two weeks at Kirkbride Airfield and the incident takes on a sinister role as a local vicar who also witnessed the crash had died in mysterious circumstances as he was about to go public with his testimony. The source thinks there might be a connection between this case and the March 4 1954 Rouen France UFO photograph. Additional details indicate that three people witnessed the event, a farmer and son who were held by military personnel for two weeks, and a poacher who claimed to have seen two bodies with "faces like the Devil's" (the poacher had a breakdown soon after). The RAF removed all evidence of the incident from the area.

The 11-year old main witness was in the back seat sitting listlessly as the vehicle traveled along the bumpy terrain in the Nevada desert. His mother, Florence, a gifted psychic, had not explained the purpose of the cross country journey to the witness. Suddenly the car stopped. The driver, a man from Brooklyn, her mother and the witness got out. A strange object manifested before the witness as the driver and her mother appeared to be in a state of suspended animation. She stood there and watched it, but felt no fear. It was more like the feeling one gets, when an epiphany unfolds that set their course in time. The object, a ship of some kind, was diamond shaped looking much like a star tetrahedron. The main witness was "beamed" onboard. The ship took off and she clearly remembers being in an orbit around the Earth, as she sat fixated looking out of a circular window. She saw three people, perhaps screened images. She sat on a bench in a circular room with a boy approximately age 5, who said nothing. If she experienced any fear, she was quickly calmed with the ethereal appearance of a male and a female in white robes. The male was an entity she had spoke to all her life "Zoroaster" who she was told would meet one day. From that point on, he would more actively be in her life as what is called a spirit guide. She would meet the boy again, many years in the future, and would know him as Alexander. She was shown a future in which she would help shape the destiny of this planet. She remembers viewing two circular screens in which endless images were shown. One ran alongside the perimeter of the vehicle, which appeared to have scenes of human history, while the other came from a "liquid like core" in the center of the room, producing archetypical holographic messages that she watched with recognition on some level, but to this day do not fully understand. There was a momentary pause, as if the projections were finished. She next remembers being on the ground and "right time" resuming. This experience would never happen again.

Suddenly he heard a blood curling guttural noise. Terrified he dropped his day's catch and ran for his car, parked in a nearby clearing. An unintelligible shout behind him indicated that whatever creature it was, it was close to him. He stopped for an instant to glance back toward his pursuer. He then saw two bizarre creatures running after him. They were short, and looked like a half man, half monkey. They were covered with dark hair. Martinez reached the car fumbling with his pockets for the keys. He dropped the keys and picked them up and attempted to open the car. He was then suddenly grabbed from behind. He fell together with his assailant into a ditch besides the road. He dropped his shotgun as two powerful arms closed over his throat. He managed to break free and scrambled towards the car. The creature jumped on top of him, screaming, growling, and biting like a mad animal. He could not reach his shotgun, so he grabbed a large rock and repeatedly smashed his attacker on the head. Screams of pain slashed through the dark night. Martinez saw his attacker move backward, blood spurting from his head wounds. He then dashed to his car. He snapped the door locked as the two creatures lunged against the car, pounding their hairy fists against the windows in frustrated rage. He managed to start the car and drove away at very high speed directly to the police station. The Zeta Grays took control of the situation as the US refused to cooperate with the "Nordics". The contact was established with the help of project "Sigma". The president was brought to the base along with several members of JCS, NSC, MJ-12, a representative from Rockefeller's office and a representative from the Rothschild group was also present. The experiment was to test the public reaction, 4 civilians were brought in for 48 hours; Mr. Mead Layne from San Diego, Mr. Franklin Allen of the Hearst newspaper group, Mr. Edwin Nourse of the Brookridge Institute and a Los Angeles catholic Bishop, James McIntyre. Those 4 were checked for 6 hours on every possible item before getting clearance to view the contact. People who remember Muroc at that time say the base was closed for 3 to 4 days and all delivery trucks were turned away at the gate. As Mr. Gerald Light stated, "I had the distinct feeling that the world had come to an end with fantastic realism. For I have never seen so many human beings in a state of complete collapse and confusion as they realized that their own world had indeed ended with such finality as to beggar description."

5 crafts arrived to the base; 3 disks and 2 cylinders. The contact was so classified that even the base AA defense guard was not informed, and the live ammo was used against the approaching crafts. The attack was futile as none of the shells could penetrate the tough plasma filled hull; eventually the military men watched in amazement as the ships proceeded to land near one of the large hangars. The disks landed near the runway, each one about 30 ft in diameter. The cylinders were hovering in the air to secure control of the situation. As Eisenhower and his small group of 6 men watched, the gray aliens disembarked and approached them. The humanoids were about 1.5m tall, without helmets. The communication was via mechanical translators the grays wore on their suits. They spoke English. The grays demonstrated their spacecraft for the president and his small circle. They showed their ability to become invisible. "This really caused the president a lot of discomfort because none of us could see them even though we knew they were still there", ---reported one military witness (a pilot) to British Lord Clancarty. Negotiations were extensive, and the final agreement was established but only in preliminary form. The grays informed they needed protection and help, saying they arrived from a dying planet, their biological system was decaying, and that they had a genetic disorder, and needed help in order to become denizens of Earth. They were seeking a cure to save their race and needed underground bases on Earth. In exchange, technology and some other benefits were proposed. At the end, the grays from the first disk got into the second disk and then disks number 2 and 3 left, leaving one saucer on the runway. The military then dragged the disk into the hangar. The disk had been left in a completely operational state, as a "present" to the US government. The disk was hidden in the hangar and later sheltered underground at the North (Haystack Butte) base. When the presidents view the UFO, 2 individuals were able to tip it upside down, since it was very light. Everyone stood back and the strangest thing occurred; the disk dematerialized in front of their eyes, it then materialized again. The scene was filmed. This was possibly the direct cause of President Eisenhower's first heart attack. President Eisenhower had to tell his vice president, Mr. Richard M. Nixon on this matter, when he returned to Washington, the disk was hidden in a hangar and later placed underground at the North Edwards base for many years. The seducing of the US government by gray technology began.

Comments: By the end of the following month, President Eisenhower's CIA director, Walter Bedell Smith, Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, David Rockefeller and other top world financiers, later Secretary of State Dean Rusk and British Minister of Defense Dennis Healy and other Western power leaders convened the inaugural meeting of the Bilderberg Group. "A means of Western collective management of the world order". One of the early items on the Bilderberg agenda was extraterrestrial contact with the Zeta Reticulian grays. Shortly after establishing itself, the Bilderberg Group collaborated with the Council on Foreign relations another international policy body devoted to world management. They discussed the problem of adjusting humankind to the extraterrestrial presence. The Bilderberg group and the Council on Foreign relations decided jointly in the mid 1950s to enter into an arrangement with the extraterrestrials: The grays were given an island in French Polynesia as a base on Earth. This arrangement afforded them an opportunity to monitor closely Earth cultures and behavior; and it permitted Earth governments a way to monitor extraterrestrial culture and behavior. "It became an on-going experiment" according to a former NSA informant. The US particularly held out for many concessions before agreeing to the arrangement. At that time MJ-12 was unaware of the fact that the grays already had a number of underground bases on Earth and the "Polynesian gift" was a trap for human civilization. In 1959 the Rand Corporation held several conferences on deep underground construction. This was done to promote further plans of mutual US/alien interaction at those bases. These conferences were attended by the various military services as well as large corporate constructions firms like Bechtel. Underground construction projects began within a year. Existing underground facilities were beefed up and new ones were started. Funding for government underground facilities comes from the "Presidential shelter" funds, as well as covert drug operations conducted by the CIA under the orders of MJ-12. Over 75 underground facilities have been constructed under various programs. But direct close cooperation with the Zeta Reticulians started in only in 1972.

Mr. K. A. a cameraman for the USAF was taken to a special assignment from Sampson AFB New York to Roswell New Mexico (later Walker Field Air Force Base). He was ordered to board an h-19 Sikorski helicopter and flown to the location of a UFO crash site. They headed north parallel to route 285 about 25-30 miles and then changed course to northwest continuing about 10 miles, where they cleared a small cliff. Suddenly below and ahead they saw brightly red, blue and yellow white flashing lights. As they flew overhead, they could see a round silvery object approximately 40-50 ft in diameter. The rim appeared imbedded edgewise into the sand. The disk had a stationary dome on its center, but the outer rim was still spinning counter-clockwise, and the lights on the outer edge were rotating in the same direction. Four small bodies were scattered outside the craft, and 2 more were inside the disk. All were dead. A small opened hatchway was on the side of the disk. The manner in which these bodies were positioned indicated that the aliens had tried to crawl out of the craft on their hands and knees, but all died presumably of oxygen intoxication. The bodies were abnormally proportioned, small dwarfs, approximately 4 to 4 1/2 ft tall, with extremely large heads, dressed in tight-fitting blue uniforms. They wore no helmets. They had light green, luminous skin. There was an overpowering stench emanating from the disk, resembling that of automobile battery acid that permeated the air. The disk was brought to Walker Field in Roswell and an attempt was made to house the object in hangar 46 but it was too small, so the craft was eventually stored in hangar 18. Heavy refrigeration equipment and other items were brought and installed. Later the disk and the bodies were moved to Langley AFB Virginia. This story is confirmed by other military men who heard their commander talking about a UFO crash near White Sands around the same time, recovered with an opened hatch and four aliens lying dead outside the UFO.

Ukrainian remote viewer Irina Volyk reported that the crash was caused by the destruction of a cubic shaped container with very toxic liquid contents. She reported that the disk was flying from some subsurface alien base in New Mexico to outer space, but crashed on its route to an alien space station

Roger Mougeolle, aged 37 and a younger work-mate Gilbert Doridant, aged 19, were engaged in logging in the forest. It is a very sparsely inhabited area. The two men were logging off branches and burning the small stuff when suddenly from the sky above them, they heard a tremendous noise "like the sound of a train passing over a metal bridge." After which all was quiet again, but three huge objects shaped like cigars came over the hill towards them. Two passed over in total silence but the third, equally silently, slowly descended over the clearing where the two men were. Its surface was quite smooth, devoid of any structural appendages or protuberances, and its general aspect was metallic and its color gray. Its size was absolutely enormous. Over 200 meters long, Mougeolle thought, and perhaps 80 or 100 meters wide and equally high, though he thought the height was a bit less than the width. The monster came to a halt with its base just a few tens of centimeters from the ground. Gilbert Doridant, terrified, fled from the spot, and never again dared enter that part of the forest. (He died of a logging accident two years later).

Roger Mougeolle, feeling sure that this was an airship, felt not the slightest fear, and stepped boldly forward and soon found himself right beneath it---and this proved to be an unwise and rash mistake. Continuing to approach the stationary, silent monster, he put up his hand and touched it. It was smooth cold, and hard like steel. He raised his woodman's axe, not with any aggressive intention of attacking the thing, but rather in order to strike it with the flat of the axe, "just to see what would happen..."

As he struck the object, he was instantly hurled a distance of six meters or so. The flat surface of the axe had made a dull sound such as you get when you strike a great piece of steel. Lying where he had been thrown, against the foot of a rock, Mougeolle found himself unable to move. What had hurled him was no blast of air or anything like that, but something totally unknown to him, something that acted uniformly upon every part of his body. And now, as he lay there, he realized that what was keeping him pinned down there was the monster itself by its very presence. This state of affairs, with the huge thing looming over him and blocking out almost his entire field of vision, lasted but a few minutes, and then the craft lifted and disappeared, and Mougeolle's paralysis at once vanished with it. Roger Mougeolle subsequently suffered no ill effects that he was aware of.

The witness was preparing some camping equipment when the radio suddenly began to buzz, looking out he saw a strange 'glass-like' ship floating above the ground at about a foot or two. He was about 20 to 35 feet from and started to walk towards it. He could see right through it and was about 10 feet from when a door in the 'starship' slid open and a ramp was lowered to the ground, there was no sound as this occurred. As he reached out to touch it he heard something behind him and before he could turn around he felt something touch the back of his neck, it seemed to be hot and cold at the same time. Then everything went black when he awoke later he at least 500 feet from where he had originally seen the object. He got his things together and began to walk home. About three hours later when he got home he saw his parents all dressed up like if they were coming from church. They asked him where he had been and he told them he had been camping. He then made a smart remark about them being all dressed up and his mother told him that they always dressed up for church. He had gone camping on Friday afternoon and he was now stunned to learn that it was already Sunday. He had lost at least 24 hours of time. Apparently the witness was never hypnotically regressed.

Carlos & Anita Jimenez had just returned home from shopping on a clear sunny Sunday afternoon. Carlos unlocked the outside door and both carried their groceries into the kitchen, and while they were stocking the cupboards, Anita heard a noise upstairs. She went to the foot of the courtyard stairs to listen again and sounds resembling soft footsteps. Both, with Carlos in the lead, went upstairs to check.

They examined all three bedrooms on the floor and there was no sign of any intruders. As they walked past their own bedroom, Anita had a strong feeling that someone was in there. She grabbed her husband's arm and both waited for almost a minute. And then they heard the soft footsteps inside the bedroom. Together they rushed through the open doorway. They stopped short, gaping in astonishment. Standing on the other side of the bed was a beautiful young woman. She looked shocked at first, and then her expression was a blend of frustration and dismay. Anita described the intruder as about 5-feet six inches tall and slender, with a honey gold tan and an exuberant mass of curling and wavy auburn hair. She had golden hoop earrings and sandals to match. And she wore skimpy attire. Anita described it as an "avocado green French swimsuit" and a bolero jacket of the same color with elbow-length sleeves. The intruder had what looked like a white plastic cast on her left forearm. Surprise both asked the intruder who she was and what was she doing in their house. The intruder looked at them for a long moment, and then relied in halting Spanish, "My name if Jelu, I am not from here." The she lifted her left forearm. The Jimenez couple saw twinkling multicolored lights along its length. The woman began tapping it as if were a typewriter. Instantly a wall of fine red mist appeared between them and the intruder. Ignoring the witnesses shouts of surprise, "Jelu" turned and faced the stucco wall behind the bed. She began tapping her thick plastic wrist device again. Carlos rounded the bed in an attempt to detain her. But as his fingers made contact with the mist, he let out a scream and tumbled to the carpet. Anita rushed to her husband's side. White faced and gasping, Carlos tenderly cradled his stricken hand. His fingers and thumb were covered with small red blisters. Suddenly a circle of golden light appeared on the wall, as it there was a hand held flashlight on the other side. The light circle swiftly grew until it reached from the floor to the ceiling. The light was soft and resembled "oil floating on water." The intruder stepped into the light and vanished. The red mist disappeared as well. As Anita pushed open the latticework shutters, she was surprise to see the intruder meters down the street, heading north towards La Compania church. In disbelief Anita realized that the woman had only left 20 seconds ago, and if not for her towering auburn style hair, she never would have seen her, for the intruder was now wearing typical Andean clothes. Both attempted to chase the strange woman but she was seen to hail a local cab and disappear from sight. The police was notified of the incident.

A young chiropractic student named Lee Crandall, who called himself "the first man to visit another planet," claims that one early evening as he was sprinting to catch a bus, he plowed into the back of a tall man clad in a brown suit. Moments later, the man vanished. On a subsequent evening, August 31 the stranger showed up at Crandall's trailer house. After introducing himself a "Brother Brocco" from Venus, he invited Crandall to travel with him---then and there---to his home planet. The young man scrawled a note, "Folks: Gone to Venus. All is well."

A luminous multicolored spaceship sat in the driveway, just behind his car. After Bocco knocked on its side, a door revealed itself, and three steps lowered to the ground. The two men were off on an interplanetary jaunt---in a ship constructed out of "magnetized dove feathers" and covered inside by a white quilted material. In no time they had landed on the Venusian surface. Bocco took Crandall on a whirlwind tour, one stop on which was a saucer factory at which Crandall learned how feathers are magnetized (though his subsequent explanation to fellow Earthlings would remain suitably vague).

Two other trips son followed. For several years before he dropped out of sight to pursue a more conventional career, Crandall was a regular on Southern California's Contactee circuit. Yet his Venusians, aside from their benign nature, little resembled the more popular Venusian stereotype (blond and attractive in the fashion of models and Hollywood actors). In Crandall's account Venusians "have pointed ears, large feet, and a duck-like gait." They also have no bones, explaining why "when you shake hands with them, their hand just seems to melt into your own." The appearance of a Venusian will literally stop a clock, but will resume as soon as the spaceperson has disappeared.

He ran towards the source of the sound, which was a sort of dip in the terrain about 150meters away and ten seconds later came upon an object flying towards the River Tamego. However in the middle of the terrain at about 40 meters from the witness, there was another identical object. The object was about 1.5m in height and about 2m in diameter. It was shaped like a half sphere, with a circular transparent base. It had a thin flange; metallic in appearance on its lower half that circled its entire surface, the rest of the object was transparent. The craft emitted a bright sun-like glow and was surmounted by a sort cone-shaped turret, brown in color. The craft that was leaving, did so in an ascending trajectory, which was first slow, at the same time gyrating on its axis, then it changed its gyration and at about 20 meters from the ground it suddenly accelerated at very high speed, disappearing towards the north. The witness felt a powerful hot wind as the craft left.

Arnaldo was able to see inside the 2nd object two beings or humanoids with large heads and two large eyes separated by a kind of brown 'line' in the center of their faces, both beings had what appeared to be two 'antennas' on top of their heads, one on each side, in place of mouths the beings had a sort of 'orifice'. They were wearing bright blue outfits resembling 'armor'. One of the beings appeared to move a sort of lever, while the other appeared to be staring at the witness. The witness was under the impression that both beings had been sitting down. He saw them for approximately 20 seconds, while the whole sighting lasted about 1 minute. 20 years later at the site where the witness saw the second craft ascend into the sky; investigators noticed that in area about 8m by 3m nothing planted there grew.

All he knew with his mastery of terrestrial phenomena was that what he had heard, he had heard. A few days later he was visited by a world renowned Yoga Master whom he knew to be alive and active in India at that time. This Master, in every way physical, entered and left through a locked door that he did not open. In the previous 10 years King had become a Master of Raja, Gnani, and Kundalini Yoga---able to attain the elevated state of consciousness known as Samadhi. On May 12 1954 at approximately 2000 Chief Petty Officer H. R. Penrose visited a public house in Derbyshire where he met a man with whom he got into conversation about his motorcar, a black Vauxhall Wyvern saloon which was about a year old. The man said he would like to buy it and made a very reasonable offer. Cdr. Penrose was undecided, however, and said he would think the thing over before meeting him in the same public house the following evening.

Meeting as arranged the next evening, he told his acquaintance that he was still undecided, whereupon he was invited to the man's house for tea. When they got there they found a sit-down meal prepared for them by the man's wife. Cdr. Penrose remembers thinking they were an ordinary English couple, although a little smaller than average. After chatting awhile he told his hosts that he had decided against selling the car, and he then took his leave at about 2230.

His journey home took him along the main Derby-Burton Road, in the direction of Birmingham. Suddenly, he said, a bright light appeared, heading towards him. He describes what followed:

"As it reached my position I experienced what seemed to be a crash and I was thrown forward against the windscreen. Then the car seemed to be lifted from the ground and I was moving through the air with a bright light above me. The next thing I remember was when I recovered consciousness in the Derbyshire Royal Infirmary where I had had stitches in a cut in my forehead."

The commander went on: "I remembered a strange occurrence which must have taken place immediately after my crash. At that moment the car was perched on some iron railings, and I recollect being lifted from it by a man in a one-piece suit. He seemed to lift me effortlessly into an entrance on the underside of a large round vehicle which was hovering above us and giving out a bright light."

Cdr. Penrose says he was taken into a room which had controls in it and other, similarly dressed "men" were operating these. These were male and female beings---distinguishable by their shapes---who had similar short hair styles, and whose facial expressions "did not appear unusual." The witness says he was asked questions about his naval experiences and his work with radar, while he countered with questions about their vehicle and its associated engineering. He also suggests that the method of communication between them was of a "telepathic nature," and adds that when he attempted some hypnotic regression, to which they seemed to 'become very confused' a woman injected some green fluid into his arm after which he remembered no more. When questioned by police officers after the accident Cdr. Penrose says he was aware that a passing RAC driver had found him concussed, sitting in the driving seat of his car, perched on railings by the entrance of the Hilton Gravel Works. After his discharge from the hospital, and puzzled by the event, he returned to the scene of the accident hoping to trace witnesses. His only success in this respect was to find a railway signalman who said he'd seen the car, with an extremely bright light above it, go past his signal box, and at about the same level.

It was also learned that he was kept in hospital for "some months" following the incident, his injuries being cuts on the top of his head and about the face. He also suffered some loss of memory. After leaving the hospital he took one of the nurses out socially as a gesture of thanks for looking after him. He discovered from her that a senior police officer had attempted to interview him while he was in hospital, but was refused permission to do so by the doctors. He learned too that the police interest arose from the abnormally large amount of blood in the vehicle. This, it seems, was far more than could have been expected from the type of injuries sustained by Commander Penrose, and it was thought that another person may have been in the car. However Penrose was adamant that he was alone in the car.

The object had a sort of "flight of steps" and at its base were three individuals 1.85m tall. The beings greatly resembled male humans, but "of the German race", they sported robust physiques, blond hair, and squared faces. They wore very long coats and military style pants with boots. As soon as the boy approached the scene, he felt "paralyzed" but then he regained control of his movement once the creatures stopped looking at him. Immediately thereafter, the boy witnessed a huge, 60 or 70 meter-wide disc hovering in the sky

Then three or four beings descended from the sky on a kind of "flying scooter", they kept their hands on its "handlebars". One of the beings appeared to be "the one in charge"; he gazed at the boy "intensely" allowing him to board one of the scooters. The scooter took off and flew towards the huge disk, which "opened and closed beneath them." The interior of the saucer was nearly empty. There was a 2 meter wide transparent apparatus that had many flashing lights inside of it. A "mobile construction" was placed all around the perimeter of the inner part of the disc, and this produced a loud noise. About 20 beings were working at some "desks". The boy was still paralyzed, and it is at this point that his recollection becomes even hazier. The boy descended to Earth in the scooter, and then he saw the huge disc depart the scene by assuming an inclined orientation. She described the object as flattened in shape, but round, and very brilliant, the color red was dominant but she could also distinguish yellow and orange, juxtaposed and spread out in strips of light. The object did not touch the ground as it seemed to rest on a kind of tripod. It was about 1m to 1.50m in height, at the level of the fir trees near the branches. The size comparable to that of a large car. The witness then saw two small beings occupied in collecting something around the meadow. Amazed, the witness did not dare to move from the dirt road, it didn't appear that the entities had noticed her. The witness described the beings as very small, 1 m or less, with a very bulky head (perhaps a helmet?) and of a metal gray color. Valentin Nikolaevich Starogortsev a physics teacher from the small town of Yamsk (Magadan region) had come to rest and cure his illnesses at one of the health centers southeast of Moscow and while he sat alone on a bench reading a book he saw a strange man about 40 years of age that approached him. The stranger immediately began to talk about scientific theories that dealt with the probability of sending wave length messages between the earth and the moon. Moments later the stranger invited Valentin to establish a wavelength connection between the Earth and the moon. He added that very few scientists, no matter their credentials are invited to the moon. But the witness reacted in a skeptical manner, not believing that settlements could be possible on the moon. But soon he saw a spacecraft land nearby and he was then taken by the alien crew to the earth's satellite. In appearance the aliens were not different from humans and spoke perfect Russian. As was later established by other sources, physics teacher Starogortsev had made huge scientific discoveries that could have been used for evil military purposes on Earth, and this is why he was "neutralized" by the extraterrestrials. After being taken to an alien lunar base, he conducted research only in interplanetary wave communications. Amazingly, the witness was chosen to teach selected humans about the alien's lunar bases.

The 13-year old witness was camping with his family and a friend when the howling of the coyotes woke him up. He then began receiving telepathic messages in his head. He rose from his bed and began waving a Coleman lantern to expose his location. Moments later a bright white disc approached the campsite, as it neared; it turned to a metallic gray craft that hovered silently above the campsite. The craft had a complex structure including a rod that stuck out at the front. Three human shaped figures looked down at the witnesses through a large porthole. The object then emitted a high-pitched whine as a panel on its bottom slid open. A tremendously bright spotlight then flooded the campsite. The witnesses felt paralyzed and in a state of confusion. Moments later the object shot away in a burst of light.

After her and several other family members had seen a large orange ball of light maneuvering over the farm, the main witness remembers waking up in her room and seeing a multi-colored light slowly spinning around her bedroom. She went to the window and saw a small gray colored humanoid with huge black oval shaped eyes, floating outside. She felt a telepathic message from the being telling her not to be afraid. Several taller white entities then entered her bedroom. Terrified she watched the beings apparently levitate her grandmother out of the room. Suddenly a sparkling shaft of light that came down from the ceiling filled the room. In the midst of the light stood a blond haired, blue eyed man like figure that took the witness's hand telling her not to be afraid. Moments later she and her grandmother were floated outside and into a brightly lit crystal like object. Before entering the object she saw several tall white beings examining her father and numerous short thin gray beings wearing headgear running around in the yard area. Inside the object numerous organic body samples were taken from her and other tests were performed. She was eventually brought back home and was allowed to keep a green stone. (This was later supposedly taken away by the military.)

R. As he looked around for the object (source of the sound), it flew from north to south at an estimated speed of 80-90 mph and 15-20 feet above the ground.

The object was circular, slightly dished on the bottom, with a windshield on the front. "It looked to be something like a transparent metal, of some type, or plastic...that's luminous or transparent or something...I don't know." Through the windshield he saw two "men" with helmets and goggles. There was an upright stick between them. He said, "...it sure sucked the ground when she went over, just like a big whirlwind or big vacuum. I am sure it would have been under control."

Moments later the beings re-entered the object that took off vertically emitting a loud whistling sound.

The person involved in this incident is a professional clairvoyant whose abilities were tested by Remy Chauvin. Her gifts are real, but she does make mistakes. It was summer when she was vacationing at her grandparents. After lunch she went out in the garden right next to the house. She saw a big light in front of her and lost consciousness. She came to, at least an hour later, still on the property, but a bit more than a kilometer from her original location. She was in the middle of a wheat field, not knowing what had happened to her during this time or how she had gotten to this spot. A typical example of missing time.

From this day on, strange things happened to her. First, no one could touch her navel; it made her jump and was unbearable. Then she became psychic. In the beginning she was very upset when she realized that she was frequently reading the thoughts of her family, thinking they could also read her thoughts. Later, as a young boarder, she experienced a number of strange events that she could never explain. Balls and bars danced, sometimes in front of her. When she separated from her husband, a few years ago, she thought about using her fits commercially and built up a clientele. She refuses to be hypnotized, fearing she will lose her abilities which are her livelihood. She also refuses to be read by any of her colleagues.

They quickly ran back to the camp and armed themselves with the rifles and carrying the bandolier (ammunition belt) the witnesses warned the others to stay behind and ran back to the edge of the forest where they had heard the strange footfalls. As twilight quickly fell the witness spotted a humanoid figure not far from their location coming out of the forest. The strange "man" was more than 2meters in height, and very thin. Floating just above the ground the stranger began to approach the stunned witnesses. One of the witnesses, Volodya Tkachenko who was armed, yelled at the figure to stop and out of fear pulled the trigger. As the shot rang out the floating figure seemed to pick up speed and flew close to the men and near the camp where the others had remained behind quickly vanishing into the darkness. The boys attempted to shoot their rifles again but all their efforts failed, the rifles all malfunctioned. The frightened witnesses could not eat their dinner after the encounter and the next day quickly finished their work and left the area.

The main witness was an electronics specialist and a civilian employee at the Air Force base when one day some military authorities escorted him and several other civilian employees into a large aircraft hangar and ordered them to stay there until they were told they could come out. None of the questions about what was going on were answered. The military men closed the hangars doors and left. The men in the hangar hung around the area where the hangar came together and they discovered they could peek outside and see what was going on.

A disk shaped aircraft about 40 feet in diameter descended vertically and landed on the tarmac outside the hangar. Several men with cameras filmed the entire incident from elevated scaffolding. Other cameramen stood on the ground. A door opened on the aircraft and a child-sized alien being walked down a short ramp. The alien used a hand-held 'computer' to communicate with the military personnel. The aircraft was on tripod landing gear with wheels, and several men were ordered to push it into the hangar across the way. Once the alien aircraft was inside the hangar, the men closed its doors. Several minutes later they pushed the alien craft back outside and it soon lifted vertically and silently and quickly darted away. As soon as the alien craft was gone the civilian men were allowed to leave their hangar.

Harold Carpenter, an employee at a local state, over a period of several weeks had kept hearing a very loud, deep humming noise, which lasted for about two or three minutes. The noise always seemed to occur between four and five o'clock in the morning. One morning, very curious, Carpenter rose from his bed, quickly got dressed and quietly stepped outdoors. With the humming noise still audible, and seeming to emanate from the southwest, Harold set off to walk to a wooded area known locally as Sunny Calvert. Determined to track down the source of the humming noise, and having come this far Harold clambered down a deep slope to where the sound seemed to be coming from. Harold peered down and was shocked to see a strange looking device. It resembled a mushroom without a stem. The object was gray in color and seemed to be hovering about eight to ten feet above the ground. Harold came to a vantage point amongst the trees where he could actually see the underside of the craft. It was definitely hovering above the ground. It was about 15 to 20 ft in diameter across the base, which housed what looked like a lip on the inside bottom. Even more startling was the sight of up to five "peculiar looking beings" gathered underneath the craft on the surface below. The beings were about four to five feet tall, and carrying what looked like "pound jam jars" with a handle in one hand and an implement resembling a pair of tweezers in the other. The beings used these to pick up bits of twigs and leaves before placing them in the clear glass looking jars. As the beings wandered around picking up various samples, all kept very close to the craft, which hovered silently above. The humming sound had now stopped. All wore the same one-piece gray; flexible looking suits that stretched over their feet. It also covered their heads much like a Balaclava. Their faces were exposed and Harold could see that these were human like but totally expressionless, with normal human like eyes. If they had any ears, the one-piece suit hid them from view. They had a snout-like nose, resembling that of a "pig." Their mouths were similar to humans, and so were their hands, until Harold noticed they didn't appear to have thumbs. While observing in fascination, Harold had inch closer and closer, until he suddenly realized that he was only to within 10 ft of the craft. At this moment one of the beings suddenly looked up and with the same expressionless face, stared directly at him. Without so much as a sound or movement, it somehow alerted the others to Harold's presence, for the rest suddenly stopped what they were doing and slowly began to retreat to the craft, which had descended to hover barely two feet of the ground. One by one the beings disappeared underneath the craft by means of its lip. The craft then began to rise, at which point Harold saw one of the beings climb through a type of "gate" housed on the inside of the lip which then closed. The craft slowly continued to climb, moving slightly to one side towards a clearing among the trees. It gradually gained altitude and speed. It suddenly emitted a flash of light and departed at incredible speed.

The eleven year old witness was on holiday when together with other children she went to the woods to pick mushrooms. She felt subconsciously attracted to some nearby cliffs. Suddenly, between the trees, about fifty meters from her, she noticed a yellowish-white oval shaped light; it was above the ground, as if supported by the cliff, but actually it was not supported at all.

She approached the light, which strangely attracted her. As she came close she saw a 'door', and close to it a figure. This being stood sideways to her but with its face turned towards her as if watching her. She approached along the path, and climbed the four 'stairs' which led up to the open rectangular door. She didn't have to bend her head to go in. Inside, she saw four more beings, standing with their backs to her, facing the walls. They were not standing in line, but 'accidentally' about the 'room', which had cylindrical pillar in the center. These four beings were about twenty centimeters shorter than the one who had been standing in the doorway. The taller figure was wearing a close-fitting suit, the lower half red and transparent, the upper half intensive red; a kind of 'mist' surrounded the lower half. There were no zips or buttons. On its head the being had a 'chimney sweep cap', on its back there was some kind of swelling, resembling a hump. Its hands were human-like, with fingers. The skin was the same color as humans.

Instead of a mouth there was a straight narrow fissure; she could see no nose. The eyes were rather small, but wider than ours, becoming narrower towards the temple. The figure was as tall as an average man---about 170cm; the girl's head reached its waist. She felt the beings were male. The girl felt an 'inner voice' instructing her to sit down on the glittering floor. She did so, leaning her head against the wall, and promptly fell asleep. The next thing she recalls is being shaken by the shoulder by one of the boys and the group of children standing around her. She was sitting on the ground beside the cliff. The children shouted at her, asking where she had been for so long a time; it was seven hours since they had seen her last. They had been searching for her in the forest, and several times had looked in the place where she was eventually found. She had a vague memory of flying with somebody, but did not tell her adventure to the other children. Only when she got home did she tell her mother, who told her 'keep silent, it was only a dream...'

On a hot and sticky night, Calvin C. Girvin (involved in other encounters) had finally managed to sleep when suddenly an odd sensation came over him. He seemed to leave his body (astral flight?) and as he glanced back he saw himself lying on the bed looking as if he were peacefully and soundly sleeping. He felt confused. Then all at once he was being drawn rapidly from the room and he felt himself growing smaller and smaller as was the room. Abruptly, he was in a void of space and he was frightened. However his mind was functioning clearly and he decided that he must have died. He knew of no particular regret, but he was relieved to discover that death could be so uncomplicated and easy---like stepping from one room to another. Now he was drifting fast toward a brilliant light and as he drew nearer to it, he felt a peculiar kind of cleanliness sweep through him. 'Was he being cleansed of his sins?' He had never thought of himself as being too sinful, but now he wondered if what he had considered harmless had really been sin. Perhaps the judges he would meet on this wild trip would really condemn him as a sinner.

Perhaps he thought, he had better try to get back to his bed, he glanced back now, but there was no sign of a house, only the planet Earth bathed in beautiful colors---green and blue and violet. This was astounding and far beyond his comprehension. He looked forward again at the nearby blinding brightness. Then quickly his vision seemed to be normal and another planet came into sight, and before him were big cities, mountains, rivers, and large bodies of water. Indeed it looked familiar. It was as if were going home. Soon his feet seemed to touch this different world and many people rushed up to greet him. It was as though he had been expected. He knew these people and called them by their names and they knew his. He was led to a large circular building that was built of the whitest stone he had ever seen. Surrounding this building were the most beautiful and exotic flowers along the banks of bubbling streams, making a fascinating picture. The scent of the blossoms was heady, making him want to dance and sing with joy, but he managed to control himself.

Next he was inside a building---a temple it looked like---and there he met several dozen others who had just come from Earth by the same method as he had. They were asked to sit down on the wide stone benches and wait until the "Great Ones" were notified of their arrival. During the absence of the messengers who had brought them there, they visited together and exchanged names. It was only a short while until the upper part of the huge room they were in was filled with people who evidently lived on this planet. Their faces wore expressions of excitement and joy. Finally seven large men entered the room and sat down before the crowd. Seven big chairs had risen from the floor to accommodate them. These men greeted them in turn very courteously, and each of them talked at length about their place of residence.

The first man said, "We have brought you Earth beings her to the planet Venus to acquaint you with our way of life. This is a planet on which much important work has been done in many sciences." There was a pause in which many heads nodded to affirm this. Girvin wondered how many of them belonged to the Venus scientists. The man went on to say, "Venus moves, as you Earth people must know, in an orbit between that of Mercury and that of the Earth, at a mean distance from the sun of about 67,000,000, miles. Its period of rotation is not exactly known by Earth people, but we on Venus do know it and are able to correct many errors of though concerning it."

Much statistical information was given to them by this man, and while on Earth such things occasionally bored Girvin, now all of it was intensely interesting. One by one, the big 'men' rose and talked to the group on various subjects. The true story of the flying saucers was explained to them at this time, and it appeared that the Earth folk had been brought here for a specific reason. Finally a man about his own height and build approached Girvin, saying, "Come with me please". Not for an instant did Girvin question his request; he was willing and eager to follow him. He told himself that whatever this man wished him to accomplished, he would, with no questions asked. As he followed the man he felt that something wonderful was about to happen to him. Still he thought its peculiar that out of all the other men from Earth, he had been selected to follow him. He glanced back over his shoulder as he left the big room, but nobody seemed to be paying any attention to him. Many of the Earth people were as before, asking questions. Too many of them, he thought. As Girvin went down the hall, the coat of the man leading him took on a bright green color, and he saw that the collar which topped it was bright orange, as were his trousers. On his feet were what looked like white glass slippers and he went along as though he were floating, not really walking. He glanced down at his own suit and was astounded to see that it was also a bright green color. But he had no orange collar and his feet were in ordinary black Earth shoes. They were now entering a small but luxurious apartment. He was walking on something white and softer than velvet. There were no windows in this room but it was brilliantly lighted. He saw no signs of indirect lighting visible, so he concluded that the illumination must be coming from a secret process 'invented by the Venus men'. The chairs and the divans were big enough to hold giants, and they were upholstered in a fancy type of material that glowed first crimson, then yellow, and then blue.

Comment [ASR2]: Since this experience, he has met back on earth several of the persons he talked with that night. All of them agreed they had been transported to another planet n the same manner---when asleep they had left their bodies.

The effect was fantastic and for an instant he was a little alarmed. Soon Girvin was asked to sit and he obeyed immediately and a strange thing happened. The chair slowly closed around him and he found his body exactly fitting it, however he was not frightened by this phenomenon, but felt oddly contented and extremely comfortable.

Now he looked inquiringly at the man and he smiled. His face looked like any Earth man's face except that it had a peculiar pallor. His hair was pure white and his features beneath it were perfectly formed, making him look handsome. "Do you feel the need of refreshment?" asked the man, his big eyes holding a light of no definable color. "You have a long journey and our chefs are ready at all times to serve food and drink." At this point the man told Girvin that his Venusian name was "Cryxtan" which he liked since it was so different from the one 'he had been given on Earth'. Girvin then asked, "So you were once on Earth?" Cryxtan answered, "Ah yes, ---and an unpleasant experience it was".

Cryxtan also told Girvin, "As you learned out in the main room, you are one of those elected to carry on important work on Earth. Do you accept the challenge?" Girvin eagerly answered, "It would be an honor to do the work, sir," Cryxtan then continued, 'Good. You are to enlist in the Air Force of the United States. While in this service you will find yourself in many places where you can work for us. We ask you to follow our directions and in doing so, be of service to us as well as to Earth folk.' Girvin was told that he would receive directions via mental telepathy and must act without questioning the motive. Girvin told Cryxtan, "I will carry out all orders to the best of my ability." Cryxtan then told Girvin to get some rest and suddenly disappeared, he had been sitting near Girvin, yet now the chair was empty. Soon Girvin fell into a deep sleep; he dreamt that he was about to return to Earth and his physical body. He did not want to leave this place yet but knew it was necessary. Then he found himself being pulled down, and was soon awake on his own bed, kicking the bed covers, his body a pool of sweat.

A bright orange light on a nearby field attracted several children hiding behind a hedge in order to surprise some other children. Looking at the field they saw an orange metallic disc-shaped object apparently on the ground, it had a dome on top and revolving orange lights on its center. The color of the object resembled brushed aluminum. A being is seen standing upright within the dome and another is seen leaving the object. Two others are on the ground, one holding a bag and the other a "hoe" like instrument. All the humanoids wore dark brown & black combination suits. Soon the beings on the ground placed their arms stiffly on the sides of their body and rise vertically then follow a curving trajectory into the object, head first. The orange light on the object dims and then the crafts shoots up at incredible speed disappearing in seconds.

Gabriel Coupal, 13, saw a 9-foot luminous ball land 150 ft away; after landing it turned black. A door opened, and "a big tall man with big round eyes" came out, dressed all in skintight black rubber except for his head, and carrying a "machine gun." There was a "buzz like a bee." The man approached and the boys ran their horse for the house. The UFO rose, passed close by them, and landed again near the horse barn. It "had a black cable with a square thing hanging." In the moonlight, it looked "like a soap bubble," and 3 men were seen walking around it. Mrs Coupal telephoned Hemmingford to get another witness, but when 3 people arrived the object took off, glowing orange, it had been present for an hour or more. Where it had rested was found a 30-foot circle of flattened grass.

24-year old Edith Jacobsen, her sister, Asta Solvang and her uncle, Halvian Jacobsen had gone into some nearby fields in order to collect wildflowers, after a while their uncle walked away from the area and both were left alone. Moments later as both women collected flowers they noticed a strange man that was walking towards them from a certain distance; he had a smile on his face and was making hand gestures towards the women. The stunned woman hesitated as the stranger approached and curious decided not to run away since he looked friendly enough. The stranger wore a greenish coverall, which covered him all the way up to his neck, they could not see any buttons or seams, and it seemed to be a one-piece suit. He also wore a very wide belt around his waist. But what really grabbed their attention was the man's long light brown hair. His eyes were light-colored somewhat slanted, his skin was much bronzed. After gesturing greetings back to the visitor, they asked him who he was and suddenly still with the smile on his face the stranger extended his hand towards the women but instead of shaking hands he slightly brushed the palms of her hands with his and then spoke in a "sing song type manner" and in a language they could not comprehend, even though both women were fluent in English, German, and Russian and were very knowledgeable with other languages such as Spanish and French. "His hands were beautiful" said the women, "with long well manicured fingers like that of an artist". The stranger seemed to emit an air of friendliness and kindness that left both women very impressed. Suddenly the man took something out of his coverall that resembled a pencil & what appeared to be a piece of paper, where he proceeded to draw a central point surrounded by several circles, which seemed to represent the orbits of the planets within our solar system. After pointing out the Earth and the moon, the stranger pointed at a 'planet' which the women were unable to distinguish due to their state of excitement. Moments later he introduced both items back into his tunic through a point which the women were unable to see.

At this point both women were feeling a little concerned but the smiling man the motioned for them to follow him. Both women obeyed his wishes and soon arrived at a small clearing on which rested a metallic lenticular shaped object described by the women as resembling two bowls placed together with a small dome on top. The object measured some 4 to 5 meters in diameter and about 1.30m in height. It was gray-blue in color. As they attempted to approach the object the man motioned to them to step back and not approach. The man then opened a hatch at the base of the object and entered it, he then closed the hatch. The women then heard a slight whistling sound and moments later the object began to rise up into air with a rotating motion. Once the craft had climbed to about 45 meters it stopped momentarily and then it accelerated its rotating motion quickly rising up into the air in a diagonal trajectory and disappearing from sight. The women notified the police after the encounter and according to police officials both women were sound of mind and well known in the community.

Hearing his dogs barking, Marius Dewilde went out and saw a dark mass on the railroad track, less than 6 yards away. On hearing footsteps, he turned his flashlight on the path, where he saw 2 very short beings (less than 3.5 ft) wearing “diver’s suits.” No arms could be seen. He approached within 6 ft, when he was blinded and paralyzed by a brilliant light emanating from the mass of the tracks. The two creatures went toward the object. When the beam of paralyzing light went out, he ran towards the track, but the object was now rising, emitting a “thick dark steam” and a low whistling sound. It became red luminous and flew away. On the railroad ties where found 5 imprints; it was calculated that a 30-ton weight would have been necessary to produce them. Recent information uncovered about the case indicates that Dewilde found after the craft took off a mysterious metallic black box. He took the box home and attempted to open it, without telling local police about it. After several failed attempts he finally gave up and hid the black box inside a carton. According to Dewilde shortly after this several French Air Force officers who somehow knew about the existence of the black box and took possession of it visited him.

Calvin C. Girvin (involved in other contacts) was driving outside of Baltimore when he spotted a pinpoint of light that was quickly coming straight at him. The bluish-white light was gradually growing in size as it drew closer. Cryxtan had told him he would be contacted by telepathy, but this was something real. Suddenly Girvin heard the following, "Calvin, this is Cryxtan, the one you met on Venus. Do you remember?" He nodded and tried to speak, but no sound came from his throat. The voice continued, 'Drive slowly, Calvin, and find the narrow road you will come to about a mile ahead. Turn off on this road; follow it for a short distance. I shall meet you there."

Now the light disappeared and he wondered if his imagination had been playing him tricks. Ha he actually heard the voice? Had that man Cryxtan actually spoken to him? Whether he had or not, Girvin followed the instructions he thought he had heard. He slowed the car and began hunting for a side road. He came upon several, but he did not feel moved to take any of them, for no telepathic message had come through. Then finally he knew he had come to the right road and he turned into it. It was not much more than a narrow path, heavily overgrown with bushes; and branches began scratching his car, much to his annoyance. Upset and thinking that the whole idea was ridiculous, he began looking for a place to turn around. Abruptly, a bright light glowed close to the ground a few feet ahead of the car. Now really excited Girvin shifted into second and drove on until he was as near as he thought he should go to the bright object. He shut off the ignition and jumped to the ground. Quivering with anticipation he walked toward the beautiful bluish-white glow coming from the saucer-shaped object. He approached the object timidly. The object was so big, it awed him. At least twenty five feet high and sixty feet wide, he halted as a man emerged from it, the saucer tilting just enough to allow him to leap to Earth. But the saucer itself hung in midair as if suspended by a wire from above.

Apprehensively, Girvin started toward the man. As he halted before him, he felt perfectly at ease, for he held out his hand and said pleasantly, "Good morning, Calvin. I see you made it." Girvin recognized him now, it was Cryxtan, his friend from Venus.

Cryxtan said, "We are pleased with your decision to enlist in the Air Force," he added "Come---I will take you into the ship and show you around." The ship was still at an angle, and Girvin saw three ball-like structures on its bottom, evidently to be used as landing gear, but Cryxtan said that they were used to filter static or electrical currents back into the atmosphere, the amount no longer usable by them. Girvin was wearing leather-soled shoes, yet he did not slip as he stepped on the ship, for it was finished roughly and had a texture like sandpaper. He followed Cryxtan inside and saw what resembled a catwalk about four feet wide that extended around the entire interior. There were small windows set fifteen feet apart. No seams of any kind were visible and no bolts and it looked as if the whole ship or flying saucer were built of one giant piece of metal. Now a door slid aside and they went down a stairway set at a twenty five degree slant to another level. The treads here, too, had a sandy surface, and Girvin did not slip.

They came into a main room and Cryxtan approached an attendant and talked to him in a language Girvin did not understand. The attendant disappeared in a room on the other side of the ship. Cryxtan turned to Girvin saying, "We are proud of our spacecraft and we do not show them to many people". Then he explained the general mechanics of the ship in a language Girvin could understand and pointed out things of interest to him. There was a machine that resembled an Earth television. It could show three hundred and sixty degrees of space and it was operated constantly. With this machine they were able to see what was taking place hundreds of miles away, as well as receive information that far off---even read a person's thoughts at any length. He took Girvin into various other rooms. One was a laboratory containing unusual instruments, and others were sleeping quarters and storage rooms. The inspection tour came to an abrupt end because the craft was attracting Earth people to it, Cryxtan said, "Follow your inner thoughts. You will be well-guided from now on and your service to us will be outstanding and important."

With that, Girvin found himself walking back to his car and as he reached it, he turned to look again at the craft that earth folk called a flying saucer. The whole top of it was getting red-hot and remained stationary while its bottom seemed to be spinning at a terrific speed. Then a hazy cloud-like vapor covered all of it as it started to move off into the night, slowly at first, then gaining great speed. Finally it was nothing but a cloud.

A Mr. Rouzeaud, aged 42 had just left Moussoulens to fetch a friend from Marseilles at the Carcassonne station, driving his "Traction Avant" car on the National Road 269, he was taken a curve when he saw posed in the middle of the road an object which he was unable to identify.

The place of the encounter is known as "Les Pepinieres de Bernardo" about 2km from Mousoulens, at the crossroads of RN269 and RN113. Mr. Rouzeaud approached thinking it was a normal 'vehicle' blocking the road and came to 10 meters from the object. He stopped the car and got out to check what it was and distinguished a small human shape apparently come out of the object which he could now see resembled a "half egg". The figure made gestures to Mr. Rouzeaud apparently warning him not to touch the object and that he should step back. The figure then points at the moon and at his apparatus repeatedly, Mr. Rouzeaud deduced that he meant that he was traveling to the moon next. A second occupant then emerged from the object, described as being about 1.30 to 1.35 meters in height, but he was unable to distinguish its facial features. Immediately the two figures then re-entered the object, the witness being unable to say how, he then hears a noise similar to 'a flock of birds' and sees the object rise up to a height of about 200 meters, then go to the north at a very high rate of speed.

Mr. Rouzeaud then went back to his car wondering if he had been dreaming. Apparently several days after the incident Mr. Rouzeaud found an unknown object on the road and he gave the object to a shoe seller named Mr. Alary from Carcassonne in order to have the object analyzed. This object was described as "no larger than a chestnut", with a smooth top as if it had been varnished, brown in color and resisting all attempts to open it with a knife. Alary claims that the chemists contracted to analyze the object were unable to identify its composition and it is claimed that when Mr. Rouzeaud asked for the object back, it was not returned to him because it is said to have been sent to Paris for 'further analysis'.

Driving to his work at a laundry, Lawrence Cardenas, aged forty-five, slowed down his car at a traffic light at 0445A. To the right was a field through which a road was being driven. Close to the derricks, Cardenas was dumbfounded to see about fifteen little men who were speaking an unknown tongue. They were around 5-feet 4 inches tall, in dark green uniforms, had on their heads tightly fitting skullcaps, with pointed peaks in front. A larger entity, in a brown uniform, about six inches taller than the rest, seemed to be addressing them. All wore heavy goggles over their eyes, and what looked like oxygen cylinders on their shoulders. Dawn was breaking, no other car was in sight, and Cardenas had just started up the car, when he was even more startled, he says, to see some 250 feet away, a big oval thing resting on the grass, with colored lights on its upper surface, flickering on and off. It seemed about twelve feet high, and had smoothly finned sides suggestive of a seashell. He was not scared, but did not wish to be late for work and drove on. The entities seemed quite friendly, and curious about their surroundings.

Georges Gatay, head of a team of eight construction workers, found himself walking away from the other workers. He felt a "peculiar drowsiness" and suddenly wondered where he was going. Then, without warning, he found himself facing the strangest apparition. Less than thirty feet away, above him on the slope, was a man, his head was covered with an opaque glass helmet with a visor coming down to his chest. He wore gray coveralls and short boots. In his hand he held an elongated object, "It could have been a pistol, or it could have been a metal rod."

On his chest was a light projector. The strange man was standing in front of a large shining dome, which "floated" about three feet above the ground. Above the cupola of the machine were objects like rotating wings or blades. Then suddenly, the strange man vanished, and he couldn't explain how he did, since he did not disappear from his field of vision by walking away, but vanished like an image one erases suddenly. Then he heard a strong whistling sound which drowned the noise of their excavator, the saucer rose by successive jerks, in a vertical direction and then it too was erased in a sort of blue haze as if by miracle. As soon as he saw the object and the entity, Gatay tried to run, but he found himself helplessly nailed to the spot. He was thus "paralyzed" during the whole observation. So were his seven co-workers, in a unique case of collective physiological reaction. None of them had previously believed in the reality of the so-called saucers. As soon as he was able to move again, Gatay rushed back to his men and cried, "Have you seen something?"

Mr. Beurrois told him, "Yes---a flying saucer!" And the man who was the driver of the excavator, Mr. Lubanovic, added, "There was a man dressed like a diver in front of it." Four others, Messrs. Sechet, Villeneuve, Rougier, and Amiraut, a truck driver---confirmed all the details of the sighting. Following the incident, he suffered from insomnia, strong headaches, and loss of appetite for a week.

The witness reported seeing a metallic saucer shaped object land nearby. A human looking being emerged from it, picked up some pebbles, earth and grass, and took a nest from a bush. The being went back into the craft, which took off at incredible speed and vanished. A few days later the saucer landed in the middle of the airfield, its human like pilot emerged and appeared to inspect it. As several men approached the craft the man straightened up, saw them and apparently immobilized them with some unknown gas. The after watching the witnesses for a moment he walked around the saucer, climbed into a kind of "cigar" which was parked next to the saucer and took off vertically. The witnesses were again able to move. As they neared the object a short stocky hairy being, ape like in appearance with glowing eyes, ran from it and disappeared into the brush. The saucer was apparently left on the ground and was recovered by the American military.

Walking across the Eli golf course searching for mushrooms, Larry White encountered a landed UFO with two human occupants standing along side it. They were dressed in metallic colored snowsuits. They conversed with White in English with a foreign accent. They told him they learned languages by means of computerized analysis of basic sounds, "formed into a type of universal graph or code." They would intervene and "take over" in the event of an atomic war, but would take nothing from us by conquest. They asked White if he wanted to visit their home planet; he demurred, not wishing to end up as a "human guinea pig in a laboratory." The object was round and saucer shaped, with a glass like tube or ring around the perimeter, through which moved an expanding and contracting coil. The object "was powered by an electro magnetic turbine which takes its power from the elements around it." The beings took some ground samples and then departed. Next day, White saw police officers examining a ring of burnt soil four feet wide and 14 feet in diameter at the site. The local newspaper reportedly carried a story on the traces, although the witness did not divulge his contact until 20 years later.

A man was about to leave his home when suddenly he felt a strange tingling throughout his back and at the same time saw that lake water shuddered within a width of ten feet, he also saw a shadow moving over the water. He looked up and fifty feet above his head he saw a large copper or bronze craft with small protruding metal spikes. He had never been so scared in his life. Without the slightest noise while flying at about 10 miles per hour, the object landed at a shallow location near the lakeshore. He did not think twice, he grabbed his oars and in his canoe headed towards the object. At about 50 feet from the craft he saw a door open on the round object which was about 30 feet in diameter and twenty feet high. Two short man-like figures emerged from the object and using very agile movements began to collect 'moss' from the water. It looked like they were wearing some type of 'plastic bag' over their heads and wore tight-fitting white rubbery suits. The witness did not see any zippers or buttons. Quite surprised he did not dare make a move and stared at the object and humanoids. They gathered grass and moss for about 10 minutes and at times seemed to emit a 'gurgling' type sound as if communicating with each other; the witness could not hear it very well. They moved around without bending their backs, which appeared to be 'square'. At one point one of the humanoids raised his hand and the witness noticed that it had steel claw-like hands. The humanoid stood there and did not move for about 2 minutes, the witness noticed round bright eyes through the plastic head cover. Suddenly the humanoid ran into the UFO followed by the 2nd one which looked at the witness as it ran. Once the door closed, the water began to 'tremble' all around the witness and then the object became bright red and shot away at an incredible rate of speed, the witness barely able to follow it with his eyes.

The walk usually lasted for an hour but on this date they came back 3 hours later and were met by a worried husband. However they had no further recollection of what had transpired. Years later their memory returned and on that afternoon they remembered seeing a large dark object on the ground next to the river. Thinking that it was a helicopter in trouble the group approached when they noticed standing near the machine a group of 4 to 5 small beings, about 1.10 to 1.50m in height, which seemed to be discussing something between them. At this point the witnesses realized that the beings were not human, also their memory becomes hazy and can only recall that a slightly taller humanoid seems to be directing the smaller beings. A group of the small creatures approach the witnesses from the woods walking in Indian file, and then what appears to be a gray sphere falls from the sky and lands next to the witnesses, incredibly the sphere resembles a "round smooth head, covered with a cap, with very deep eyes without pupils" and appears to float without a visible body supporting it. The period following becomes increasingly confusing. Finally the family remembers seeing the creatures entering the landed object one by one. The "floating head" nonchalantly supported itself by the opened door while the beings re-entered the object one by one. Before entering the object the last humanoid made a warning hand gesture to the witnesses, which suddenly felt a strong gust of hot air, which obliged them to close their eyes and lower their heads. The craft had now disappeared. The witnesses further describe the beings as having large heads, long arms, wearing gray combination suits with caps.

We know all about the wars that plague your planet (and the ones to come) and is for this reason that for some time our aircraft have been flying over your world". He then continued, "Your nuclear weapons tests worry us. We fear for the peace of the solar system of which your Earth is part of. If another World War would start we would intervene. Any attempt of destruction would be stopped and annihilated by means unknown by your science. We hope that we will never have to intervene." The strange briefing finished with these words. The extraterrestrial then walked toward his saucer at the same time putting on the helmet that he was carrying. He saluted the witness with his hand and then entered the object. The door slid close without a sound and suddenly a pale yellow light illuminated the saucer. A sort of whistling escaped from openings located all around the saucer. It then rose gently vertically like a helicopter ten meters from the ground. A fisherman claimed to have seen a mysterious creature which was dressed in a red suit and spoke to him in an incomprehensible language. Another rumor, reportedly originating from an anonymous location in the province of Mantua, involved the landing of a “Martian” craft witnessed by a boy. The boy threw a stone at the metallic object, and then a rubber tipped arrow. In both instances he heard a metallic sound.

After contacting supposed extraterrestrials on short wave radio, Richard Miller was instructed to go to an isolated location near the city. After 15 minutes a disc shaped object appeared and landed nearby. A doorway opened in the base of the vehicle and a staircase descended. He then saw at the head of the stairway a young man dressed in a brown one-piece outfit. He beckoned Miller to enter the object, which he did. He found himself standing in a large circular hallway, which seemed to encircle the whole craft. The young man radiated of friendliness, which put Miller at ease. Miller was then taken to a control room where he met the "alien" commander, Soltec that greeted him in perfect English. He was then given a message of love for the human race & told that we were not ready for contact.

An unidentified woman, riding a bicycle from Bordeaux to Royan, saw in a field at Cozes an object shaped like a turtle, surmounted by a cupola. It emitted first an orange light, then green, dimming and brightening alternately. Two human forms appeared nearby, one of which carried a shaft or rod and seemed to be looking for something. A violet light from the object illuminated the beings and the woman was able to make out two small human like faces behind the faceplates in their helmets. But instead of noses, she could see only two small holes just above the mouth; and instead of the two usual eyes, she saw a single eye in the middle of the forehead. Letting out a scream, the object (and the two beings, presumably) disappeared emitting a slight hum.

At the center of each of the objects, there was an illuminated "pole" piercing them vertically from one edge to the other. The UFOs flew at an altitude of about 150/200m, dispersing a sort of fiery screen about them. Suddenly both objects descended, nearly touching and scorching the tops of some pine trees. Rossi claimed to have observed a "dark human shaped mass" tearing away from the first of the saucers. This appeared to be a small male...a "dwarf".

At a few hundred meters from the railroad crossing he suddenly saw to his left, in a grazing field, about 150m away, a strange humanoid figure only about 1.50m in height. Surprised, Cesar slowed down his pace. He then saw the small individual walking towards a machine having the shape of a reverse bowl about a meter in height and about 2.50m in width. According to Cesar the humanoid was indeed half a head taller than the object. The humanoid entered the object and sat on a visible armchair. As soon as he had settled inside the machine slipped gently of the ground at a height of about 20-30m and then suddenly rose up into the air without emitting a sound. Renzo Pugina, 37, a stock cubes salesman was parking his car in the garage of his villa, he was returning from seeing a movie. Pugina noticed a soft glow in the park of the villa, but he attributed this to the moon. After he had parked the auto, Pugina reportedly ascended one flight of stairs connecting to the principal lane of the villa, when he observed a strange figure at the top of the steps, adjacent to a tree. The creature was 1.3m tall, and presented his left side to the witness. According to one of the main press sources for the case, Pugina stated that he recognized the being to be a "Martian". "He couldn't have been anything but a Martian!" The creature was surrounded by a soft, warm light and appeared to be encapsulated in armor. It wore a helmet which was transparent in the front, and it seemed that most of the light emitted by the creature was concentrated at the top of its head. The upper part of the body (up to half of his trunk) was covered in slightly luminous overalls comprised of metallic scales---“like a fish”---while the rest was contained in a great “pipe” 50cm high and 20 centimeter wide (no legs were visible). A much smaller pipe was attached horizontally to the first one, remaining just centimeters above the ground. This was approximately one fathom in length (or 1.5 meters, according to one source). Nearly at the end of this pipe was a luminous disc “as large as a bicycle wheel.” Its upper part was dome-shaped and orientated horizontally over the pipe, but there was no apparent contact between the two elements. Pugina started to climb the steps, but after a few seconds, the creature rotated his trunk towards the man, to his left. He also slowly rotated his head, as if manipulated by some mechanism. The creature held a type of flashlight in its right hand, inside of this was something like a light bulb which produced a faint illumination. The device was directed at the witness who, simultaneously, felt paralyzed (one source claimed that Pugina was struck by a beam of light). The witness remained in this state for some time. Pugina noticed that the outer features of the creature’s face were rather normal yet striking, featuring almost no forehead and eyes that were almond-shaped. Its face was olive in shade “as if it had been splashed with car motor oil.” One Pugina grasped a bunch of keys in one of his hands; he regained control of his body.

Pugina advanced a few further steps toward the creature, pronouncing in Italian just one word “Martel!” (Mars!). He did this in order to communicate to the being to not leave. The creature appeared to grimace, while Pugina advanced another step in its direction. At this point, the creature alighted one meter off the ground and flew away along the lane of the villa, maintaining a flight path below the tree branches. The being produced a soft buzzing noise. Pugina ran along the lane, but the creature disappeared behind a curve. The entire sighting lasted but a few minutes. The witness’s wife was sleeping but she woke up as a result of Pugina’s hasty arrival. He was in shock, could not speak, and was shivering. Pugina’s wife said that her husband shivered all night long. The press reported that Pugina remained in bed for two days as a consequence of his encounter. Evidential trace was found on the gravel of the villa’s lane the following day. It was odorless, dry and greaseless. One or two days afterwards, this trace area had greatly expanded. The local Carabinieri claimed that Pugina was a “normal” individual not known to drink or to suffer from psychological problems.

He did not dare to approach the object which was brown in color. In its center there was a cabin, and at the two ends he could distinguish a number of small propellers similar to pine cones. At the back end, the broadest end was a bent tripod. After a while, the two men approached the machine which they then placed upright on the tripod. The witness supposed that the machine was made out of some very light weight material or plastic. He says he did not notice any portholes. One of the men then opened a narrow door and both individuals disappeared into the cabin. Without any noise the two groups of propellers started to turn, but in opposite directions. The machine took off vertically at about 100 meters and then disappeared quickly towards the north. The two men were similar to humans, Caucasian, between 1.70-1.75m in height.

A ten year old girl, Janine Seon living in a farm at the locality of "Les Egots" was in a field tending her cows when she saw in the sky a very white "object" oval in shape which was descending towards the ground. The slope of a hill masked her sight as she moved towards it. She then saw an object resembling a 'bucket' though larger, with window panes. She approached it when suddenly, a man who was resting on a stump and whom she had not seen up to now, approached as if he wanted to prevent her from going towards the object. The man was dressed in red, but his clothing looked like if it were made out of 'iron'. He walked with stiff legs and was making gestures. He had long hair and a hairy face. He was slightly taller than her, possibly about 1.40m in height. What frightened her was his large which were like those of 'oxen'. He spoke to her in a low voice but she didn't understand and then he showed her something green which he held flat on his hand, approached her, touched her on the shoulder and then went back to his apparatus, he opened a door which was in one end of the object, the object rotated and then went straight up into the sky. It did not make any more noise than that of a sewing machine. She saw what appeared to be flames coming out of the object and then she saw blue, red and green colors and then the object vanished. Originally when Janine walked towards the object her two dogs followed, but when she arrived to the location of the object the dogs ran away without barking.

Two 18-year old farm workers, Jean Cheradame & Rene Marais, encountered a bright light source on a field. As they approached the light, two featureless illuminated human forms emerged from the light source. They lacked both arms & legs, and essentially resembled "white plastic bags" lit from within. They emerged from the light source in the field and separated into two distinct forms as they approached; when they receded they again merged into one form before merging with the light source. They were about five feet tall.

He fled, but returned with 22 others from a nearby café. The beings wore "white trousers, tapering as if they covered only a single leg, with very wide girdles of dark color. The thorax was confined in an iron gray metallic garment, and on the head was a transparent helmet; the intense light from the disc made it possible to see a dark colored countenance, with a proboscis resembling a little elephant." The witnesses threw stones at the entities and at their craft, whose upper portion was a transparent dome illuminated by a white light so strong as to hurt the eyes. A man identified as "Vincenzo Dattilo" (aged 67) a lawyer-journalist-writer-poet, was praying before the main convent when he saw a "star" descending from the sky while it spun very rapidly. The object flew horizontally to and fro for some time, and then stopped at approximately 100 meters over the witness head. Subsequently the "star" descended vertically and landed "smoothly and silently," at a distance of some 20 meters from Dattilo. The intense illumination surrounding the object extinguished and the witness observed a large, 10 meter-wide saucer. The object had two domes at its center, one above and the other underneath. The upper dome possessed two long and thin antennae which moved slightly as if from the wind. The object appeared to be positioned a bit above the ground while not coming into contact with it. All of the sudden, an oval hatch opened in the lower dome and a small creature emerged. The witness glimpsed another creature in the lower, transparent dome. This second being was seated and appeared "fluffed up and ruffled" like a doll. The first creature approached the witness and made a gesture as if to say, "Stay where you are do not move." It stopped at a distance of about four or five meters from Dattilo, and both he and the creature made eye contact with each other. The being stood approximately one meter in height and was dressed in a transparent outfit which emitted a bluish colored light. This spacesuit seemed "impermeable to anything coming into contact with it from the outside." The creature began to speak by emitting some guttural sounds. At first Dattilo didn't understand a word, but then, his "linguistic knowledge" led him to comprehend the source of the being's speech. After some attempts, Dattilo and the creature finally managed to converse in Old Latin, although they made many mistakes. The creature claimed (also by using some gestures whereby it pointed to itself as well as the saucer) to be of this world, from a country where science had developed much during the last number of years. This nation's craft were reportedly powered by enormously gigantic natural forces, a revolutionary discovery able to render any other aircraft or weapon obsolete, and "to introduce the peace of heaven to the entire world." Dattilo inquired of the creature the reason why these saucers were piloted solely by beings short in stature. The being's response had to do with the continuing development of the craft; this was not perfect, the creature's made some gestures and jumped about a half meter off the ground, remaining stationary in mid-air. Dattilo reported that in the country where the saucer was built (he refused to divulge the name of this nation), "little men" are highly esteemed and specially trained to become saucer pilots. The creature glanced around, and Dattilo spoke to it in some words of Latin. In response, the being offered a greeting with its hand and then turned toward the object. The creature entered the object's transparent cabin through the open hatch, aided by some external force. It took a seat besides the other being, which had its hands on a type of steering wheel mechanism. This other creature sported several small, bright flashing lights on its face. The object illuminated and thereafter took off vertically, producing a slight rumbling sound. Once the object had attained a certain altitude, it flew back and forth horizontally while continuing its spinning. Subsequently the object departed at great velocity and disappeared from sight.

They were speaking a language that sounded like Chinese, 'liu, lai, loi.' Their mouths showed strong, rather protruding teeth. Approaching Lotti, they snatched from her the carnations and one of her stockings; wrapping the flowers in the stocking, they threw them into the "spindle." Then one of them took out a brown wrapped circular object, carrying it in the crook of the arm. Lotti ran away; she looked back after 100 yards & saw the little men still there. M Raymond R, and a 13-year old boy noticed a gray object on the edge of the woods; they approached through the woods to within 130 ft of it. It was about 30 ft in diameter and a total of 16 ft high; it had a 10-foot cupola in which was a row of portholes. It made a humming sound like a transformer. A man not more than 5 ft tall stood near it; he wore a transparent suit, apparently made of plastic, with black clothing beneath it, and a dark gray helmet that rested on his shoulders. On his back, beneath the suit, was something that gave him a humped appearance; on his chest was a small shiny black box. Moving heavily, he walked about near the saucer. Raymond R took 7 photographs, only 4, which came, out well. The man returned to the UFO through a door at its base; then two others came out, in the same costume. One of them carried a sort of pistol with funnel shaped barrel, the other a white ball as large as 2 fists. They went to the place where the first man had been, turned their backs, and did something that produced a blue luminous smoke. At this point they boy, frightened, ran off through the woods toward a nearby road. Immediately one of the portholes of the cupola became green luminous, and a beam swept the area where he was running. Some 20 seconds later, with a loud whistling sound, the saucer took off vertically...R found the boy paralyzed, but this quickly passed off. At the site where the UFO had been, the grass was burnt and the earth blackened and strewn with a sort of cinders, over a radius of 3 meters. Raymond found also a part of the white ball, which was a cottony substance but as heavy as lead, and a yellow powder resembling sulfur, which was also very heavy. Soon after collecting this powder in a paper, his fingers began to burn, and next day were blistered and blackened. The powder was later analyzed and found to consist largely of silver nitrate. At 1505, 9 orange luminous objects crossed the sky, and one of them landed in exactly the same spot, with a soft whistling sound. The witnesses were 600 ft away and dared not to go closer. Two men, a journalist (Tino) and Raffaele Favara were walking on a road after the conclusion of the last cinematographic show when they noticed a green-bluish light coming from inside the nearby soccer field. Approaching the gate they noticed on the field a strange object, triangular in shape with floppy disks on each tip that rested on the ground. There were bright silvery flashing lights that at times illuminated several strange figures which appeared to have membrane wings moving around the craft. The two men ran to obtain additional witnesses but as they did so, they spotted the triangle rising up into the air and quickly leaving the area towards the sea.

A 48-year old farmer, Amerigo Lorenzini, was placing some grass in a rabbit hutch just outside of his home. All of the sudden, Lorenzini heard a swishing sound (like a flock of swallows make), interspersed sort of a metallic noise, coming from above him. Gazing up, Lorenzini was blinded by a dazzling light, and then he eventually passed out until the light went out. At this point the farmer observed a cigar shaped object which had landed in a nearby clearing. The object was surrounded by a luminous halo. A hatch opened on one side of the object, and a group of smallish creatures emerged from it. The beings moved towards the kitchen garden of Lorenzini's house---showing no signs of indecision, as if they were familiar with the location. Lorenzini was taken aback by what he saw, but he retreated to the house door. From there, nearly hidden from sight, he got a look at the very small beings wearing a metal diving suit like uniforms that covered even their faces. The creatures spoke with one another in low pitched voices, paying no care to the farmer. They approached the rabbit hutch and seemed interested in the rabbits within. Lorenzini interpreted their gestures as indicative of their intent to carry all the rabbits away. Lorenzini went into the house, retrieved a rifle, went back outside and aimed the rifle at the creatures. He pulled the trigger, but the rifle did not fire. Lorenzini attempted once more, but he was still unsuccessful. At this point he had to drop the rifle, because it had become too heavy to hold. He became frightened and tried to shout—however, he was unable to accomplish even this. The farmer observed the creatures seizing all the rabbits, returning to the object and then entering it. The cigar-shaped craft took off very rapidly in the direction of Avenza, leaving in its wake a very bright trail, even more intense than the halo that had surrounded the object while it was on the ground. Lorenzini managed to pick up the rifle and to fire it successfully, but the object was already long gone. Although in shock Lorenzini called out to some people, to whom he pointed out the emptied rabbit hutch.

Nurse Alberto Sanmartin decided to take a midnight stroll through the neighborhood in order to alleviate a severe toothache that would not let him sleep. He thought of going from Cuatro Caminos to the Ciudad Universitaria like he usually did. As he was crossing the bridge "Puente los Franceses" he noticed a strange figure wearing a one-piece coverall of "angelic" aspect that emanated 'peace and goodness' as he stared at Alberto. According to Alberto the stranger resembled a 'pilot wearing a gray flight suit of metallic appearance without any seams or openings'. The stranger's hands were extremely long and pale. Moments later Alberto was able to see under the bridge a disc-shaped object. After a brief series of hand gestures the witness was made to understand that he was dealing with someone from another planet. And then without saying a word the extraterrestrial walked down towards his landed craft and returned a few moments later giving Alberto an enigmatic rectangular stone. Surprised by the turn of events Alberto watched as the extraterrestrial bade goodbye with a gesture and returned to his landed craft. Immediately after the object took off at very high speed disappearing into the starry sky. The strange stone given to Alberto was described as rectangular in shape with violet tones, very light, and measuring 12 x 4 and with numerous strange inscriptions on its surface. The stone was given the name of "Piedra Marciana" or the Martian stone, due to the belief at the time that the supposed extraterrestrials visiting the earth were indeed from the planet Mars.

Accompanied by newspaperman Arcadio Baquero (who first let the world know about the stone) Albert Sanmartin provided the stone to the Mineralogy institute of Madrid for analysis. Nothing out of the ordinary was found on the stone since it was apparently composed of calcium and carbon. However Professor Pedro Garcia Bayon-Campomanes from the same institute declared that the stone was very strange since it had parts of it that were soluble and others that weren't and that it was salty in nature but did not contain any salts. Once 'analyzed' all the efforts were concentrated in an attempt to decipher the strange symbols on it. The stone was given to Professor Don Joaquin Maria de Navascues a well known epigraphist and director of the Archeological Museum. However he was unable to decipher the symbols except for one that seemed to represent the planet Saturn. However other UFO enthusiasts such as Severino Machado claimed that he had deciphered the symbols or (messages) on the stone and stated that it was a message from the planet Saturn to Earth.

This "leg" was covered in a type of fabric printed in a pattern of small flowers, "like the fabric used to make children's pinafores." 18-year old jockey Jose Parra, out on a training run, came upon 6 very hairy little men loading rocks into a disc shaped craft which was hovering less than 9 ft from the ground. Parra started to run away, but one of the little beings pointed a device at him that emitted a beam of violet light, and he found himself paralyzed. The entities jumped aboard their craft & it took off. At the site were found footprints "neither animal nor human."

Wong Yi Moi, a young Chinese girl had been tapping rubber trees near the edge of a large estate not far from the Trolak River when suddenly she heard a rustle in the grass behind her---before she could turn, she was seized by powerful arms, which were covered with dense, black hair. Struggling, she managed to look over her shoulder and found herself staring into a face that was straight out of a nightmare, with two long, blackened fangs jutting out from between thick lips. In a frenzy of horror, she saw two more ape-like creatures standing by the edge of the forest. Their skin appeared to be white beneath its covering of black hair, and their faces were distorted by fearsome grins. The two creatures by the trees were over six feet in height, and wore loincloths. Each carried a knife slung from the waist. The creature struggling with Wong Yi appeared to be a female. She wore a yellowish skirt made of bark and uttered weird, croaking cries. Finding additional strength the young Chinese girl succeeded in tearing herself free. As she fled, she snatched one terrified glance over her shoulder, but the creatures were moving away back into the forest. Two other people had also spotted the "fang men" along the banks of the Trolak River within hours of Wong Yi Moi's experience. The first was a corporal in the Malaya Police, Abdul Talib, who had been on patrol with a security detachment. On seeing the three weird creatures on the opposite bank of the river, the corporal raised his rifle and all three-ape creatures dived into the river and swam out of sight. The second witness was an Indian rubber tapper named Appiasamy. Hairy arms too had grabbed him from behind. Breaking free he had run for his life only to fall headlong down a rocky slope, bruising himself badly.

Alerted by children Elizabeth Klarer ran to a nearby hill. An object about 60 ft in diameter then silently descended to 10-12 ft above the ground, 20 yards away. It had a flat hull rotating around a flattish dome, with portholes. In one of these she saw a man "with a thin face, aquiline nose, and high cheekbones," who looked at her with hypnotic intensity. The man was blond and appeared to have light gray eyes, he smile at her in a gesture of reassurance but she backed away. Then, with a blast of hot air, the craft rose & disappeared at tremendous speed.

As they were traveling by car to Mendoza on Route # 143, a group of seven persons saw brilliance at the side of the road. It was a luminous object resting in a nearby field, emitting a bluish light, about 100-200 meters away. According to the description of Prof Maria Luisa de Amaya, it had the form of 2 deep dishes placed together edge to edge. They could not make out any structural details. The witnesses stopped the car, got out, and walked toward the object. When they were about 50 meters from it, they noted that there were 2 human figures next to it, of normal height, wearing one piece diver's suits of a dark color, their heads covered with a kind of cowl. One of them was crouching next to the object. After he got up, the 2 individuals entered the UFO through a sort of rectangular door, the object began to emit smoke or gas from its equatorial region, at the same time that it rose up vertically and then stopped a few meters from the ground, throwing out 2 flickering red lights. Alarmed, the witnesses returned to the car and started off at high speed. The object followed them for 20 minutes, until, with the first light of dawn, they could no longer see it.

A 62-year old bell chimer was walking down a mountain pathway in order to reach a small church in which his job was to ring the bells. All at once, he heard a "loud and odd noise" ---however, he did not see anything when he had a look around. After having traveled a few meters further, he arrived in a treeless clearing where there he heard the noise once again. The man looked upward and sighted a strange 10-meter long cigar shaped object hovering approximately 3 or 5 meters above him. It is unclear whether the object was already over the man---though he was gazing at it from a slightly diagonal perspective---or it arrived and came to a stop. In any event, the witness became afraid and nearly fell down, then got hold of himself and continued to watch the object for about 5 minutes. The craft appeared to be composed of some polished brass and was larger in its central section. The forepart was transparent like glass. There were two creatures inside this section, one seated behind the other. They both seemed to be regarding the man with interest. Their demeanor was "joyful" and the witness stated humanoids resembled "smiling children". The beings wore black uniforms and "very odd helmets." Three kinds of propellers were attached to the top row of the craft, and three more to its bottom one. When the object was stationary, the propellers also were still too, they resembled a fishbone-shaped structure. Alternately, the propellers rotated when the object was flying or departed from the location. Subsequently, the man resumed his trek towards the little church---and before arriving there, he once again heard the same loud noise. He observed the object departing rapidly in the direction of a nearby valley.
